The expedition is sent out by a syndicate of American capitalists, and im-portant discoveries are anticipated in consequence. Than Mr. King no one is better competent to lead such an expedition, as he is thoroughly acquainted with the Island.

Cave-Evans.—Rev. W. D. Barber, at St. Saviour's church, Victoria West, on Wednesday evening united in marriage Alfred E. Cave and Miss May Evans. Mr. W. J. Cave supported the groom, and the Misses Evans, sisters of the bride and Miss E. Cave acted as bride, and Miss E. Cave, acted as bridesmaids. The bride was given away by her father. The church was taste-fully decorated and crowded with fully decorated and crowded with friends of the contracting parties. A reception was held, after the ceremony at the residence of the bride's parents. William street, Victoria West. Mr. and Mrs. Cave left for Seattle, and on returning will take up their residence in Victoria West.

Curious Find.—A miner employed at Protection Island off Nanaimo harbor, has made a curious find. On Wednes-day morning he came across a very fine specimen of petrified potato. The formation is so accurate as to be undeniable, the eyes being marked quite clearly in the surface, and the end where the root has been attached to the potato being clearly noticeable. The specimen was picked out of some sandstone that was blasted from the roof of the mine over 700 feet below the surface, and close beside it was a piece of conglomerate clam shell and sand petrified hard as flint. It has been suggested to Mr. Doney that he send these specimens down to the provincial museum at Victoria, but he thinks the coal company the fair was discussed. The long-overdue bark Lyderhorn, for whose safety fears were held by the underwriters and others, has arrived safely at her destination. Yesterday morning cable advices were received here that she had been towed into Delago Bay the night before, after a long voyage of 166 days from Ballard, with a cargo of lumber. The Lyderhorn was reinsured at 25 per cent.—the rath having been advanced but the day before her arrival. There was considerable of the reinsurance was maintained for some time, for the Lyderhorn had a reputation for two things—slowness and stability. The alarm felt for the vessel as a result of her long passage was increased by the fact that during the storm season, a month or six weeks after the departure of the bark from the Straits, the stern of a shipping men are wondering where the wreckage came from. As will be remembered, it was at first feared that the Ancona, which left after the Lyderhorn was partly laden, was found on the Vancouver Island coast. Now shipping men are wondering where the wreckage came from. As will be remembered, it was at first feared that the Ancona, which left after the Lyderhorn, had met with mishap, and others talked uneasily regarding the Brabloch, both vessels being still en route, the former from Chemainus to Delagoa Bay, and the latter to Calcutta from Chemainus to Delagoa Bay, and the latter to Calcutta from Chemainus men having visited this.

The Lyderhorn is well known to Victoria shipping men having visited this.
