A Quartet composed of young men of rare ability, every member being a musician as well as a singer, they are at their best in the songs that call for vigorous action. With all the animation and enthusiasm these young men possess, in clearness of enunciation, in harmonious blending of voices and in effective rendition of every number, THE CENTURY QUARTET ranks among the best.

WHAT THE PRESS SAYS!

Burlington (Vt) Free Press—The Century Male Quartet proved a first-class attraction here last night. A large audience heard the singers with great appreciation and called for encores for every number, and some numbers more than once. The program was well balanced light and serious, popular and classic, and was carried through with a decided snap. It was one of the best heard in this city for a long time.

Rochester (N. Y.) Post Star—A large audience of music lovers greeted the Century Male Quartet last night, and hearty and continued applause after each number attested the pleasure the artist's offerings afforded. The Quartet numbers were excellent selections, even to the encores sung after each in response to the appreciative applause. The solo numbers by the members of the quartet were of a kind that carried enjoyment. Their perfect phrasing and diction were a delight.

Camden (N. Y.) Journal—The members of the Century Male Quartet are certainly experts in the art of harmony. Every one of the members were enthusiastically received.

Cortland (N. Y.) Standard—The Century Male Quartet which made such a decided hit with the audience in the afternoon was equally popular in the evening program.

Malone (N. Y.) Evening Telegram—The work of the Quartet individually and collectively, and the interspersing of highly amusing and catchy little songs among the more serious numbers gave a most satisfactory variation to the program.
