

day following. Through the zeal and influence of brother W. Pomeroy, the Congregational Chapel had been procured, but as it would not be opened for us until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the Disciples came together as usual at their 11 o'clock meeting. Uniting with this little assembly we gave attention to reading, singing, prayer, exhortation, and teaching, not forgetting the emblems which commemorate the death of our once crucified Lord. Brother Menzie was principal speaker; a man, like Apollos, "mighty in the scriptures."

It was arranged that I should speak in the afternoon. The congregation, all things considered, was not small; and to all who were assembled we spoke freely and unreservedly those things which we have learned. — The Chapel not being at our command in the evening, we formed a part of the audience of the Rev. Mr. Webster, Episcopal Methodist Minister, and Editor of the Canada Christian Advocate.

The privilege of the Chapel again being granted, on Monday evening brother Black addressed the congregation on the subject of christian character, or the power of the gospel as exhibited in the lives of those who receive and honor its precepts. This discourse, it was generally believed by the brethren, was instrumental in removing much prejudice. That it was calculated to have this effect no one who heard it could have any hesitation in saying; but we cannot expect that the fortresses of venerated customs and the bulwarks of humanly ordained divinity are to be penetrated, shaken, and leveled by a single effort.

Brother Ash left us on Monday, and brothers Black and Menzie resumed their regular travels on Tuesday, leaving us to conclude the meeting on Tuesday evening. The congregation was increasing, and we were almost tempted to make another appointment; but the demands of affairs at Picton hastened us away. — From all that we could hear, see, or learn, we judge the meeting was not altogether unprofitable, and that a second meeting would result still more favorably.

Early on the morning of Wednesday the 21st we left Cobourg for the District of Prince Edward, and arrived the next day at Picton in safety and in health. CONDUCTOR.

Father Omega and his son very modestly declined their conversations for this number, in order to give a respectful hearing to others. They may be expected to say something next month.
