

However, the existence of a new binational tribunal to review dumping and countervail cases and make binding decisions on them is a significant new feature. The presence of Canadian trade experts on those panels will keep the system honest and free of political influence.

This is a significant improvement over the status quo and will bring much greater security to Canadian producers.