

On August 17, 1935, I gave him $150 as a loan to aid in paying for a major operation on his wife. Dr. Irving Stein, of 310 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, who was to have performed the operation, says he had not seen Mrs. Sammon since October of 1934, when she was a post-natal patient.

Mr. Sammon lived at 822 Montrose Ave., until mid-August; after which time he gave 825 Montrose Avenue as his address. Upon investigation, I found there is no such number on Montrose Avenue.

I had earned the money for my tuition through caring for several patients. I had to leave Passavant Memorial Hospital, where I was in training, due to weak metatarsal and plantar arches. Dr. Sammon had promised me a position to pay $25 a week as his secretary, and now it is difficult to find employment. He had made other promises of recommending me to influential persons.

I should be very happy to secure some information concerning Dr. Sammon. In the event that he is intending to pay my $204, I should not wish to jeopardize his future by advising the Public Health Service of his actions, but it appears to be my only remaining course of action.

I trust I am not inconveniencing you too greatly.

Very sincerely yours,

Miss Hazel A. Miller
