

the Government—Protest of the Magistrates against the suppression of the Legislature—Unpopularity of the President—Description of the territory within his jurisdiction—Some account of Maine and New Hampshire, and the intrigues of Massachusetts to extend its authority over them—Desire of Charles II. to confer the former on the Duke of Monmouth, and to establish a Royal Government in the latter—Both comprehended within the Commission of President Dudley—Character of his administration 212

CHAPTER II.

Arrival of Sir Edmund Andross—Fears entertained of the King—His conduct towards New York—His opinions of popular assemblies—Commission to Andross—Two companies of soldiers sent to Boston—Law relative to marriages—Manner of imposing taxes—Punishment of those who refuse to pay rates—Episcopal Clergymen prevented by the mob from reading the burial service—Preachers attack the Governor for his toleration, and justify compulsory conformity—Arbitrary conduct of Andross relative to titles of land—Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey united to Massachusetts—News of the arrival of the Prince of Orange in England—False rumour spread of a general massacre—Insurrection—Capture and imprisonment of the Governor and his Councillors—Conduct of the Magistrates who resumed the old Government—Sir Edmund escapes, is retaken and sent to England, where he is released—Example of Massachusetts followed by the other colonies—Bad effects of so many political changes in England—Remarks on the appointment of Andross to be Governor of Virginia 229