drowned, and carried to the Morgue and properly identified-not by me, curse you, Lucile Laroche. And then you were properly buried, and not by me either, nor at my cost, curse you again. are dead, I tell you!' She looked at him as she looked at you the other day, dazed and spectrelike, and said: 'Henri, I gave up my life once to a husband to please my brother. He was a villain, my brother. I gave it up a second time to please you, and because I loved you. I left behind me name, fortune, Paris, France, everything, to follow you here. I was willing to live here while you lived, or till you should be free. And you curse me-you dare to curse me! Now I will give you some cause to curse. You are a devil-I am a sinner. Henceforth I shall be devil and sinner too.' With that she left him. Since then she has been both devil and sinner, but not in the way he meant; simply a danger to the safety of this dangerous community; a Louise Michel-we had her here, too!-without Louise Michel's high motives. Gabrielle Rouget may cause a revolt of the convicts some day, to secure the escape of Henri Durien, or to give them all a chance. The Governor does not believe it, but I do. You noticed what I said about the Morgue, and that?"

Shorland paced up and down the room for a time, and then said: "Great Heaven, suppose that by some hideous chance this woman, Gabrielle Rouget, or Lucile Laroche, should prove to be reeman's wife! The evidence is so overwhelm-
