He had good boots, dark coat and knickerbockers. His hair was cropped off close to his head, but what little had sprouted up since the clippers had been applied, was almost black. His underclothing, while not of the best material, was not worn out by any means. Bulging from his trousers' pocket, an extra pair of under drawers were found. From his head to his feet he had the appearance of one who expected to be exposed to the cold of the night and possibly for several the night and possibly for several

The police are searching for the parents, but so far are at a loss to know who they are. If the police efforts prove fruitless for a day or two longer the boy will be removed to the hospital for insane and kept at the cap.

NO LONE HAND IN LIFES CARRIED AWAY UPPER SALVATION IS SOCIAL

of Humanity and Need to Seek Own Divinity in Saving Others.

A lad of 10 or 12 years of age was found wandering about Queen-street, near the subway, on Saturday evening, in a state of utter helplessness mentally. On being asked his name he replied by looking a complete blank. He was taken into No. 6 police station and later to the Children's Shelter.

It is said that shortly before the lad was picked up he was in charge of a woman, who had the garb and general attitude of a foreigner.

His mind is such a blank that he has to be fed with a spoon and looked after like a mere infant. He was piaced in front of a washstand yesterday and told to clean himself up. He selzed the soap and began applying it to his hands and continued doing so until the attendant became rather tired of watching the performance and took the scap from him and proceeded to apply it vigorously to the boy's body, which doubtless had not known such cleansing for a good whife.

Possibly the little chap was not to blame for not smearing his face over with the soap, for it was quite apparent that he had not been brought up to that sort of living, excepting on the found. The text was from Hebrews on the congregation.

That there can be no individual success of the whole community was the basis of an interesting to an interesting to the whole community was the basis of an interesting to the whole community was the basis of an interesting to the whole community was the basis of an interesting to prevent last night. It was an unusual line of thought the preacher pursued thru his distinction and the preacher pursued thru his distinction and the preacher pursued thru his distinction. The text was from Hebrews of the socialistic ideal applied to Christianity. His belief in the spiritual unity and solidarity of the race is profound. The text was from Hebrews and let us run with palience that its set before us."

Dr. Eakin wasted no time in getting to the point that he, washed to impress on the congregation.

"Our character and moral growth here depend on social relationships. He was decided to the prediction of you which doubtless had not known such cleansing for a good white.

Possibly the little chap was not to blame for not smearing his face over with the soap, for it was quite apparent that he had not been brought up to that sort of living, excepting on high days and holidays. What he did was done in abundance—at least abundance of soap was used.

"Hello, mister," he cried as one of the attendants passed the room where he was placed. It was quite an achievement for the lad, and the attendant was so startled that he stopped and tried to get the youngster to continue his conversation, but the lad took on his old vacant look and the attendant had to go on about his work, believing the boy was fully as bad as he had thought.

Who the lad is no one knows, but the police are confident that the parents wished to rid themselves of their encumbrance by leaving the lad on the street to follow wherever fate might lead.

It was decidedly out of the ordinary line of stereotyped sermon when Dr. Eakin said forcibly and with assurance:

"Your individual heaven is a myth. There's no such thing. Salvation is social. Some people think that by one trick or legerdemain they are goling to get to some place of parfect bliss, alone. But a person can't do this without the individuals who surround him."

"It is only as a man realizes his obligation to the world around that the grows to perfection."

By no means does Dr. Eakin believe that the same heavenly rewards are in store for the eleventh-hour repenter as for the just man who leads a Christian life. Referring to the statement in the Presbyterian catechism. That "The souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness and do immediately pass into glory," Dr. Eakin remarked that with all due deference to those who formulated that statement, it wasn't true to reason or Scripture.

"Let men only know that there is an interfered part of the ordinary line of stereotyped sermon when Dr. Eakin heaven is a myth. There's no such thing. Salvation is social. Some people think that by are t

FAITH OR LUNACY

"The world will become a vast lunatic asylum if men cease to have faith," and Rev. G. B. S. Gillings of Whitehaven, Eng., last night in preaching at St. Paul's Church, Bloor-st. Taking as his text, "He was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith," the preacher briefly surveyed the life of Barnabas, and the moral of his life as applied to modern conditions. It was because Barnabas openly avowed faith in Saul of Tarsus that the latter was able to take his place in the Christian community at Jerusalem and subsequently became a great leader of the Christian church. Mr. Gillings maintained that many men to-day owed their success in life to those who had shown faithe in them when their fortunes looked blackest. It was not possible, said the preacher, for us all to be clever, but we could all be helpers of others—centres of consolation. It was men like Barnabas who had faith in God and in their fellow creatures that were needed in all low creatures that were needed in all the turmoil and suffering of modern

GREAT CROWDS; GOOD BAND. One of the largest crowds of the sea

One of the largest crowds of the season was at Scarboro Beach last night and heard the Ninetcenth Regiment Band of St. Catharines play a pregram of sacred and classical selections. Judging from the frequent applause that was accorded the band, it made a hit with the crowd, and the popular verdict apparently agrees with more expert criticism, since Mr. George Sarvis, the soloist, says that he never heard "William Tell" played with so much expression before. The band will give two concerts daily, afternoon and evening, thrucut the week. The headliner of the free entertainment will undoubtedly be Howard's Bears and Dogs, which is one of the best acts of its kind now before the public. The tricks the bears have been taught to perform prove that there are no more intelligent wild animals, altho their treacherous disposition makes them at all times dangerous. Veronica and Hurl-Falls, the comedy gymmasts, and Bobby Pandur and Brother, the equilibrists, will make up the rest of the bill. The offering should draw great crowds of children, particularly, as the bears and dogs are a circus in themselves.

Sam Blythe, writing a year or so ago in a popular magazine, said that the English "warmed their drinks and teed their houses." Now comes an English writer. Harry Graham, in The Graphic, supporting half of Blythe's charge. Graham says that "water has never attained in England the popularity it deserves, chiefly owing to the fact that as a nation we are singularly ignorant of the proper way to serve it. Even in the houses of the wealthy, where the wine is beyond reproach and the soda water is kept at a temperature below freezing point, the water bottles that adorn the dinner table too often contain a warm fluid that is absolutely undrinkable. Long and bitter experience teaches us to shun this tepid beverage, and we turn with a sigh of relief to those gaseous substitutes whose charms cannot, however, hope to rival the perfection of the genuine article."

The steamer suffered several minor damages.

Captain Esford appears to have done everything possible to avoid an accident after he saw what was imminent, but without success. While not actually asserting that the accident could have been avoided, he claims the snubbing posts at the lock are too close to the head gates for all round safety. He has salled for years and never before experienced serious mishap.

Chief Engineer Weller and his staff accomplish repair of the damage to the lock in record time. The journey had to be made thru twenty locks before any effective work could be done, yet navigation re-opened at the usual Sunday night hour, nine o'clock, as if nothing unusual had happened. This was the first serious break in the Welland Canal this year.

The day ride between Toronto and Montreal over the Grand Trunk doubletrack line is very interesting, with River St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario in sight most of the way. It makes a charming trip. The up-to-date coaches, parlor-library and dining cars, enable one to travel without fatigue, and it is delightful while traveling at a 50 or 60 mile galt over a smooth roadbed, to enjoy the dining car service of the Grand Trunk, which is strictly first-class. Leave Toronto or Montreal at 3 a.m. daily.

It was a matter for sorrow, he said, that supervisors were necessary in places where people worked together. Where $500 per week was paid for work done $200 per week was paid for seeing that it was done. That state of affairs would disappear when the world was more enlightened and was more honest. It was a sad comment, he said, on present day civilization when it was known that the swiftest move many men made was to the cashier's wicket on pay day. It was also a sad comment when the men people worked for would not raise salaries until someone else offered the worker more than he was getting. Everybody, he said, should be paid what he was worth. There is nothing romantic about a strike, and strikes are always inconvenient and unremunerative to the persons who are not seeking for improved conditions, but the truth is that we are in the midst of a great industrial upheaval, far more has been said concerning the strikes great industrial upheaval, far more important than the abolition of the house of lords, or the improvement in air-craft.

We are frequently told that the labor party has been a failure in the house of commons. The reason is not far to seek. The worker wants more wages. At one time he thought, in a dim way, that he could seculre this end thru the intervention of parliament, but the has found out by experience that parliament is powerless in the matter, and that he must carry on his campaign in other directions.

We hear a great deal about socialism and communism, but when all is said and done, this British worker is an individualist of the most pronounced type. He wants a proper return for the money which he earns in his own way. Some workers like to save, others like to spend, some like to support chaptels, some like to bet, and some like to frink, but they all fiave one common object, viz., to get more money to spend in their own particular way.

Trade unions are frequently criticized with much asperity, but anyone who is acquainted with the industrial life of the country must recognize that they have been the main factors in the wine has undoubted.

Trade unions could not afford to run the risk of balva conditions of this individualistic campaign for more wages is not confined to this country. Strikes are taking place all over the world, all of which proves that notwithstanding the socialistic propaganda, human nature does not vary in its main essentials. The most marked of these is that every man has a keen eye to his own interests, and a very keen desire to live his own life in his own way.

In the old days men did not mind very much whether the exercise of their own liberties prevented the exercise of similar liberties. >Individualism.
