MONDAY MORNING, AUGUST 9.

Governor Cox Opens Fire.

Governor James M. Cox of Ohio did not fall dead from shock when he was informed on Saturday last by the official notification committee that he had been chosen as the Democratic candidate for president. Being a newspaper man, the governor had probably seen something of the kind in some of the exchanges, and he had also been apprised by the telegram of congratulation, which his opponent in the presidential race rather cavalierously sent him some weeks ago. Neither did a member of the official notification committee drop to the floor with heart disease upon learning from the lips of the Ohio governor that he would consent to be their candidate. Nevertheless the function, unnecessary as it may be in this age of electricity, gave the Democratic candidate a chance to make a speech to the committee, and thru the committee to his followers throughout the country.

The governor took an advance position on the peace treaty and league of nations, declaring that the ratification of the treaty would be the first work of his administration. Altho he left the door open for some mild reservations, the governor practically stands shoulder to shoulder with President Wilson. He denounced as dishonorable and disgraceful Senator Harding's proposal for a separate peace with Germany, and intimated that Mr. Harding's nomination had been dictated by the senate oligarchy, speaking thru Senators Lodge, Penrose and Smoot.

Thus the Democratic candidate gets off to a good start with a plain and courageous statement of where he stands on the league of nations. No body knows exactly where Senator Harding stands. On the other hand, it may be argued that Senator Harding's indecision pretty well mirrors the mind of the average American, who rather hates to stay out of the league of nations, which his own president brought about, and at the same time shrinks with alarm from "entangling alliances," European wars and imperialism.

The rest of Governor Cox's speech is in the same frank strain. He told his audience it was no longer troubling, but a time when every public body had to think straight and speak straight on every public question. Nevertheless he glided rather hurriedly over the demands that were being put forth by the Farmers-Labor party. He wisely refrained from speaking of the open shop, whose advocates are carrying on a vigorous propaganda in the United States, being much encouraged by the "outlaw strikes" and the public outcry against the ever-increasing cost of production. But it was a good speech and gives promise that the Ohio governor will carry on an aggressive campaign.

What is Happening in China.

Beyond a general impression that a civil war is raging in China between the north and the south, the public does not get much information. It happens that the insurgent leaders largely make their headquarters at Canton and Shanghai, and are able to get more over the cables than the central government at Peking. The fact seems to be, however, that people at large are not greatly interested, and that the insurgents are mainly soldiers of the former regular army under command of their old generals, and kept on foot by subsidies from Japan.

When the Republican government came into power, a large part of the regular army was disbanded, but some sections refused to disband. They roamed about the country living more or less by loot, and avoiding any serious engagements with the government forces. Later on they were utilized by Japan as a valuable asset in disintegrating China and embarrassing the Peking government.

Westminster Abbey in Danger.

Astonishment bordering on consternation, has been caused thruout the English-speaking world by the recent appeal of Bishop Herbert E. Ryle, dean of Westminster, for popular subscriptions to a fund for the preservation of Westminster Abbey. The venerable pile, much of it constructed more than a thousand years ago, is feeling the ravages of time, and a good deal of structural work will have to be done immediately to strengthen the towers and preserve other parts of the abbey from decay. The sum needed for the restoration work at present, and to keep the abbey hereafter efficiently in repair, is placed at two hundred and fifty thousand pounds sterling.

The amount seems insignificant compared with the greatness of the work, and could not doubt be easily raised by popular subscription in London, or for that matter, in New York, within a few hours. The design is apparently, however, to permit the peoples of all the English-speaking nations to take part in this pious work.

At this distance it would seem strange that a building so historic and visited by so many thousand pilgrims daily from all over the world, could get so badly out of repair without causing any public alarm, and that after all these years no adequate permanent provision has been made for the upkeep of this national monument. It would seem, however, from the dean's appeal that the financial provisions for the physical preservation of the abbey and the carrying on of the devotional services, which after all, is its primary purpose, have been so interlarded and intermingled that money designed for the repair of the building has been more or less diverted to provide for its ecclesiastical staff.

That the amount needed will be raised, and that ten times that amount could be as easily raised if needed, goes without saying. England without Westminster Abbey is beyond the imagination of the most ruthless iconoclast. It has become, as the bishop says, in making his appeal, not only the great Pantheon of England, but the great temple, as it were the Mecca, of English-speaking people thruout the world.

INVESTIGATION OF G. A. C. CARNIVAL

Impossible to Definitely Place Responsibility or Any Misappropriation.

The following is the report (counter-signed by J. Harry Flynn, Dominion organizer, G.A.U.V.) of an investigation made into the matter of the carnival held recently under the auspices of the organization and which has attracted strong criticism from various quarters: "At a meeting of the board of directors of the Grand Army of United Veterans, held on Wednesday, Aug. 4, which session lasted until 3 o'clock in the morning, an investigation was begun on the carnival lately conducted by Freeman Bernstein, under the auspices of the Grand Army of United Veterans. This investigation was held at the request of J. Harry Flynn, who had just returned from a months' trip to the west, and who was distressed at knowing and making public the reasons why the carnival was not a success, and, if possible, placing the blame on the shoulders of the board of directors and admitted responsibility for having advised the Grand Army of Canada to bring Mr. Bernstein here to conduct the carnival. Colonel Green testified that he had been misled into the character and responsibility of the carnival, and thought that he was reliable, and that he had been misled into the character and responsibility of the carnival. It was on the recommendation of Colonel Green that the board of directors entered into with Mr. Bernstein. "L. M. Montgomery, a New York to make arrangements for signing up Jimmy Wilde, and at the same time investigate Mr. Bernstein's record. His report he received from Bradstreet and elsewhere was unsatisfactory. He claims that he reported this fact to the board of directors of the Grand Army of Canada, but as the contract had already been signed and arrangements made, he considered it too late to change plans. "The carnival went on. "It may be stated here that L. M. Montgomery was given complete charge of the carnival, and that he was the one who was responsible for the misappropriation of the money. The carnival materialized only in part, as the Will Wallace fight, which is estimated by those capable of making such an estimate, that it was at least a $20,000 crowd. The total reported by Bernstein, et al, was $14,000. According to the contract with Mr. Bernstein, all money collected in connection with the carnival were to be turned over to L. M. Montgomery and deposited in a chartered bank and drawn for all expenses made thereon. Deliberately breaking this contract, Freeman Bernstein ordered Weir Anderson, who had charge of the ticket office at the park, to turn over to him $5,000 in cash. Weir Anderson claimed that he was under Bernstein's orders and turned over this $5,000 to him, and this amount was not deposited in the bank. Bernstein claims it was used to pay off fighters. Mr. Montgomery claims that he saw no receipts for same. The matter of this $5,000 was taken up with Mr. Guthrie, chief of detectives, who states that he has no evidence to show that Bernstein had used this $5,000 to pay off legitimate expenses of the carnival. "Lieut. Jack Munro stated at the investigation that he had $1,000 to Bernstein for the moving picture shows. This amount was never reported paid over to the public treasurer of the carnival, but by Mr. Bernstein, nor accounted for. This matter will be taken up with Mr. Guthrie, chief of detectives, to ascertain what can be done. "On the night of the Wilde-Wallace fight, a committee was appointed by the board of directors of the G.A.U.V. to remain at the gates and help check up on all receipts. When they were there they were not permitted by Mr. Bernstein to follow out the instructions they had received from the board. Whether or not they should have submitted to Mr. Bernstein's orders, is open to question. "No Profit or Loss. "Orders were given to give the turnstiles at the main gate working. Contrary to these orders, Mr. Weir Anderson did not have the turnstiles in use, giving as an excuse, he could not find the key. The Grand Army of United Veterans desired to have Mr. Bernstein held or brought back from New York to give a complete accounting, but he was informed by the detective bureau that no definite proven charge can be laid against him. The board decided that it looked as if anyone guilty would cover their tracks. The Grand Army of United Veterans did not lose financially on the carnival, neither did they receive any profit from it. Bernstein's promise to turn over $5,000 sounded very good, but it never materialized. The Grand Army of Canada would have lost money were it not for an iron-clad agreement whereby Mr. Bernstein assumed all responsibility for all liabilities in connection with the carnival, and we may say here, that a number of such liabilities are constantly coming in; but, according to the contract and agreement under which the carnival was held, this accounting assumes no responsibility. The whole matter seems to be one of those cases where it is impossible to place definite responsibility or misappropriation, but the board agreed that Bernstein absolutely and deliberately broke his

A REAL SUMMER WEEK-END

URGES ENFORCING "SANDY" MEASURE

President of Ontario Branch of Dominion Alliance Discusses Prohibition.

Chas. E. Steele, president of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance, in passing thru Toronto yesterday, discussed the present prohibition situation in the province. He said that "as a result of the decision of the Dominion government to adhere to the date fixed April 18 for the taking of a vote on the Canada temperance act, a situation has been created which must cause grave concern to every citizen of our province, and, naturally, we look for its remedy." "In my opinion," said Mr. Steele, "the remedy lies in the bringing into force of the 'Sandy' bill at the earliest possible moment. Unfortunately, this bill, as it now stands, cannot become effective until after a vote upon the Dominion measure, because it contains the following clause: 'This act shall not come into force, or take effect until after a date to be named by the lieutenant-governor-in-council, made the declaration provided for in section 163 of the Canada temperance act, as amended by the act to amend the Canada temperance act, passed by the parliament of Canada in the tenth year of His Majesty's reign.' "Alliance's Strong Stand. "When this matter was before the provincial legislature, Mr. Steele said, the Alliance took a strong stand, and at that time a statement was issued which, in part, was as follows: "A great opportunity for important and effective action has come to the temperance workers of Ontario by the introduction, in the legislature, of the 'Sandy' bill, while not categorically dealing with 'importation,' actually prevents it, by controlling the transportation, carriage, delivery, receiving or taking delivery of liquor for sale or consumption within the province. It further provides that any contraband liquor may be seized wherever found and dealt with as provided for in section 70 of the Ontario temperance act. Adequate penalties are provided and the entire machinery of the Ontario temperance act is made available for its enforcement. "The 'Sandy' bill applies not only to liquor for beverage purposes, but for all purposes. It absolutely stops 'short-circuiting' by preventing the liquor being taken from one part of the province to another, except for export or by order of the board of license commission, and it gives the board absolute control of the disposition of all liquor for sale or consumption in the province. "Section 10 of the 'Sandy' bill, is however, distinctly objectionable, in that it provides that the act shall not come into force until after the lieutenant-governor-in-council has, by an order-in-council, made the declaration provided for by Bill 26." "We submit that the 'Sandy' bill is one which should be passed upon its merits by the legislature. There is urgent need for it, and it stops 'short-circuiting' and it gives the board absolute control of the disposition of all liquor for sale or consumption in the province. "To tie the 'Sandy' bill to Bill 26, or any other measure, is to mix things which should not be mixed, and to seriously jeopardize the final passing and coming into force of a thoroughly good law that is much needed, and needed at once. "Why should the province of Ontario, which has expressed its opinion emphatically in October last upon this issue, be required to wait for months for what our elected representatives have within their power to give immediately. Further, it must be remembered that the remedy for existing bad conditions, with which the 'Sandy' bill adequately deals, cannot be corrected except by provincial legislation. "Why should the coming into force of a competent and urgently-needed provincial law be made conditional upon the possible result of a vote taken upon a different measure enacted by another legislative body?" "To Save Situation. "Subsequent events," Mr. Steele remarked, "have justified the position then taken by the Alliance, and added force to the representations then made. What next, then? The course

SUMMER COMES AGAIN

Saturday Saw Advent of the Real Thing—Sunday Was an Ideal Day for Outdoors.

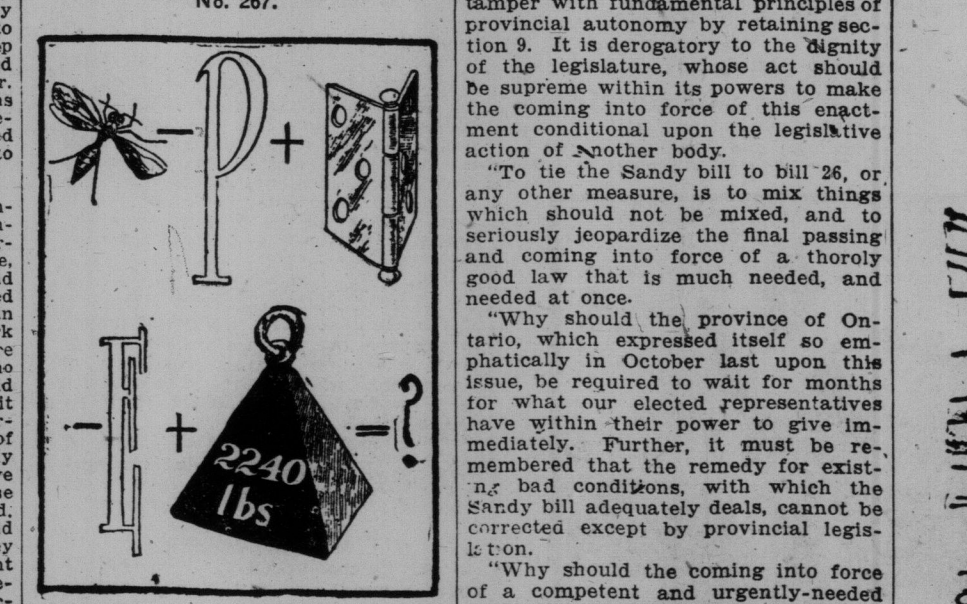

The long expected summer weather arrived on Saturday with the result that there was a big trodus of people at the various popular resorts. The Island, which had the additional attraction of the firemen's sports, was crowded; bathing was largely indulged in; there were sailing craft out galore, and, indeed, everything was reminiscent of the good old summer days. There was some humidity in the atmosphere, but this was scarcely noticed among the pleasure of the advent of sunshine and warmth. Sunday was an even more ideal day, a refreshing breeze tempering the rays of the sun and making outdoor life more enjoyable. The various resorts were again well patronized. Many people have started on their long delayed vacations, and, if the weather keeps up, of which there is every indication, the rush for holidays will continue.

GOOD WESTERN CROPS MAY ATTRACT WORKERS

Altho it is impossible to ascertain the exact number of those who will leave for the harvest fields of western Canada on the excursions of this week and the week after, yet the traffic departments of all railroads anticipate carrying a much larger number than last year. The reports of good crops in the west are expected to attract many, but some of these may not go until the second week's excursions on account of the backwardness of the crops in some parts of Ontario.

JUDITH OF BLUE LAKE RANCH

By JACKSON GREGORY.

CHAPTER XXI. BURNING MEMORY.

As June had slipped by, so did July and August. On Blue Lake ranch life flowed smoothly. Men were too busy with each day's work to sit into the night prophesying trouble ahead. And in truth it seemed that if Bayne Trevors had ever actively opposed the success of the Sanford venture he had by now accepted the role of inactivity forced upon him by circumstance. He was with the Western Lumber Company, as director and district superintendent, seemingly giving all his dynamic force to the legitimate affairs of the company. But there were those who placed no faith in the obvious. Bud Lee kept in touch with Rocky Bend and learned that Quinn had not come back; that no one knew where he had gone. Carson's man, Shorty, was sought by Emmet Sawyer and his disappearance was like that of a pricked bubble; it seemed that Shorty had no actual physical existence or that, if he had, he had taken it into some other corner of the world. Quinn's friends had also gone from Rocky Bend, like Quinn, leaving behind them no sign to show where they had gone.

Knowing Quinn as he did, and having his own conception of the character of Bayne Trevors, Bud Lee said to himself that too great a quiet portended strife to come. If Quinn was the man to carry in his breast the hate that drove him to the murder of Judith's father, then he was the man to remember the humiliation he had suffered at Lee's hands, to remember and to strike back when the time was ripe. Judith had heard of the night in Rocky Bend, a lurid and wonderfully distorted account from Mrs. Simpson, who had received it in a letter from her daughter. "So that was what Bud Lee did after he killed me!" must Judith have thought. She sent immediately for Carson and forced from him the full story. Dismissing Carson, she remained for a long while alone. Only one remark had she made to the cattle foreman, and that a little aside from the issue occupying his mind: "Keep your weather eye open for what's in the wind," she told him, briefly. "Behind Quinn is Trevors, and the year isn't over yet."

The ranch was shocked to its utmost capacity. Carson had bought another herd of cattle; Lee had added to his string of horses. The dry season was on them, herds were moved higher up the slopes into the fresh pastures. Carson, converted now to the silos, was a man with one idea, and that idea ensilage. Again the alfalfa acreage was extended, so that each head of cattle might have its daily auxiliary fodder. Carson now agreed with Judith in the matter of holding back sales for the high prices which would come at the heels of the lean months.

The man Donley, who had brought to the ranch the pigeons carrying cholera, was tried in Rocky Bend. The evidence, the circumstantial, was strong against him, and the prosecution was pushed hard. But it was little surprise to anyone at the ranch when the trial resulted in a hung jury. The ablest lawyer in the county had defended Donley, and, finally, late in August, secured his acquittal. The man himself did not have $10 in the world; the attorney taking his case was a high-priced lawyer. Obviously, Trevors was standing back of every play his hirelings made. Doc Tripp had the hog cholera in

WANT $50 A WEEK

Time alone will tell whether or not the moving picture operators will receive the large increases they are asking for. This is the cryptic statement issued by the managers of the movie houses. The movie operators are asking $50 a week in houses of more than 500 seating capacity, and $1 an hour at all houses. The Strand, The Regent, The Allen, St. Clair Allen, The Oakwood and a few others have the surplus seating capacity, but only 20 per cent. of all the theatres in the city will be able to consider the $50 a week demands of the men, the others being under the 500 mark. The theatres are now paying 90c an hour.

SUBSTITUTING LOW GRADES.

Low grade cyanide is being imported from the United States into the Hollinger and Dome mines in place of the much higher grade stuff hitherto brought in from Glasgow, Scotland. The authorities at the mines anticipate an annual saving in expenses of nearly $20,000, at the Dome Mines and between $10,000 and $40,000 at the Hollinger Mines, provided the low grade chemical proves satisfactory.
