The KING OF DIAMONDS

 At that instant a savory smell was wafted to him. He was passing a small restaurant, where sausages and onions sizzled gratefully in large tin trays, and pork chops lay in inviting prodigality amid rich, brown gravy. The proprietor, a portly and greasy man, with bald head and side whiskers, was standing at the door exchanging views as to business with his next-door neighbor, a green grocer. Philip, bold in the knowledge of his wealth, resolved to try what he could achieve on credit.
 "I have not got any money just now," he said to the restaurant keeper, "but if you will let me have something to eat, I will gladly come back this afternoon and pay you double."
 Neither man spoke at first. Philip was always unconscious of the quaint dialect of the restaurant keeper, but he was far removed above these considerations, and he backed up the request by a pleasant smile.
 "The fat man grew apoplectic and turned his eyes to the sky."
 "Well, I'm—" he spluttered, and Philip blushed.
 "Do you refuse?" he said, with his downright manner and direct stare.
 "Well, of all the cool cheek—" The stout person's feelings were too much for him. He could find no other words.
 "Is a fair offer," persisted the boy.
 "You don't think I mean to swindle you, surely?"
 "Well, there, I never did!"
 "But the greengrocer intervened."
 "You're a sharp lad," he guffawed.
 "Dye want a job?"
 "No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."
 "Dash my buttons, an' you're a libelous sort of a kid to get it, too!" In a jolly good way, Lord Lumme, it'll do me good to see you."
 "Mr. Judd, you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.
 "Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a bob's worth if he bursts himself. Ere, I'll bet you two bob's pays up."
 "Don't walk in, sir. Wo'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"
 Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellent, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop, and gave his orders with a dignity that astounded the proprietor and hugely delighted the greengrocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peeping at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and the bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully. He held out his hand.
 "Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."
 Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.
 "Talks like a little gentleman, 'e does. If my little Jimmie 'ad lived 'e would 'a' bin just about his age. Lord Lumme, I 'ope 'e lad turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes! Fresh in this morn'."

but the boy's ready wit brought two clerks running, and a door was thrown open. Phil released his opponent and instantly explained his action. One of the clerks, an elderly man, looked a little deeper than the boy's ragged garments, and the mention of Mr. Wilson's name procured him a hearing. Moreover, he had previous experience of the youthful janitor's methods.
 With a cuff on the ear, this injured personage was bidden to go upstairs and say that Mr. Wilson had sent a boy to see Mr. Isaacstein.
 The added insult came when he was compelled to usher Philip to a waiting room.
 Soon a clerk entered. He was visibly astonished by the appearance of Mr. Wilson's messenger, and so was Mr. Isaacstein, when Philip was paraded before him in a spacious apartment, filled with glass cases and tables, at which several assistants were seated.
 "What the deuce—" he began, but checked himself. "What does Mr. Wilson want?" he went on. Evidently his Ludgate Hill acquaintance was useful to Philip.
 "He wants nothing, sir," said Philip. "He sent me to you on a matter of business. It is of a private nature. Can you give me a few minutes alone?"
 Isaacstein was a big-headed, big-shouldered man, tapering to a small point at his feet. He looked absurdly like a top, and surprise or emotion of any sort caused him to sway gently. He swayed now, and every clerk looked up, expecting him to fall bodily onto the urchin with the refined entrance who had dared to penetrate into the potentate's office with such a request.
 Kimberley, Amsterdam and London combined to lead effect to Isaacstein's wish when he said:

Fashion Hint for Times Readers

THE SHEATH SKIRT NEED NOT BE IMMOBILIZED.

The burning question as to whether or not the American woman will adopt the sheath skirt is yet to be solved. Certainly, in some of its developments it is exceptionally beautiful as well as artistic. These skirts are cut in one piece when developed in the wide brocade, silk-lined cashmeres and satins. Around the bottom they measure less than three yards, but owing to the leeway allowed by the opening it either fastens blindly from the short waistline to a tulle below the knee, or is drawn together at intervals with military ornaments of chenille or fancy braid.

PRINCE OF WALES SAILED FROM QUEBEC EARLY THIS MORNING

He Boarded the Indomitable Last Night—Cheers of Thousands of Citizens and Thunder of Salutes Marked His Departure—How His Royal Highness Spent Yesterday.

Quebec, July 28.—All the warships in the harbor again thundered forth a royal salute of twenty-one guns this evening, when the Prince of Wales left Canadian soil and boarded the Indomitable not to touch land again until he reaches England.
 The departure of the prince is really the beginning of the end of the series of festivals of the past ten days, though the course of events would permit him to touch land again until he reaches England.
 An interesting announcement made from the citadel this evening is that the Prince of Wales, on the eve of his departure, has presented to the people of Canada a chair which belonged to General Wolfe.
 The prince's last day in Canada was a very busy one, and he was kept on the go all the time. Fortunately, however, there were no state functions until he attended the various functions in the ordinary attire of a gentleman, which he did in the morning, when he planted a tree in Victoria Park, the ceremony being witnessed by a big crowd, many being surprised at its dignified brevity.
 In the afternoon, however, the prince's time was very fully occupied. He first attended a gymkhana at the Q. A. A. A. grounds, where he stayed for some time, and then left for the plains, where a garden party was given in his honor, and at which he spent an hour walking in the grounds, chatting with various friends in the most informal style, in fact the prince had possibly planned to make his visit as free as possible from fuss and feathers, and he managed it so well that his arrival was almost unnoticed, as also was his departure, the only formalities attending either ceremony being the attendance of a guard of honor and the hauling up and pulling down of the royal standard.
 The prince was so pleased with the show that he will return before he left the grounds. After giving the younger generation a chance to cheer their future king, the prince drove to Spencerwood, the beautiful residence of the lieutenant governor, Sir Louis Jette, where a delightful garden party was given in his honor, and at which he spent an hour walking in the grounds, chatting with various friends in the most informal style, in fact the prince had possibly planned to make his visit as free as possible from fuss and feathers, and he managed it so well that his arrival was almost unnoticed, as also was his departure, the only formalities attending either ceremony being the attendance of a guard of honor and the hauling up and pulling down of the royal standard.

SUMMER COMPLAINT.

One of the Commonest and Most Dangerous of Diseases.
 Everyone Should be Prepared for it with a Bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.
 Very few people escape an attack of Summer Complaint. It may be slight, or it may be severe, but nearly everyone is liable to it.
 You cannot tell when it seizes on you, how it may end.
 Let it go for a day or two only, and see how weak and prostrated it will leave you.
 There is only one safe way to cure it, and that is by Dr. Fowler's EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY. It has been on the market for sixty-three years and has been proved and tried so often as not to experiment when you buy it.
 Do not accept a substitute or imitation, as many of these are positively dangerous to life and health. Insist on having Dr. Fowler's.
 Mrs. Norman H. Eissu, Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last summer my baby was very bad with Summer Complaint. I tried most everything for him, but nothing seemed to help. One day a neighbor called in and told me to try Dr. Fowler's EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY, so I got a bottle and after a few doses my baby was cured. I shall always keep it in the house."

 men will join him in hoping may long be deferred.
 An odd incident occurred during the return of the prince and his party from the garden party at Spencerwood. Lord Roberts, field marshal and idol of the British army, had attended the reception, of course in full dress, which looked very different from the "Bobs" of the chromo lithograph, and he drove back to the citadel in an ordinary carriage.
 "Bobs" lost no time in accepting their invitation, and was delighted with the incident, shaking hands with the detectives, and chatting with the police as they covered the route to the citadel.
 "Bobs" finally had to get out, and started to walk up the hill to the citadel, when Chief Detective Dunlop of Toronto and Detective Carrington of Montreal in an automobile passed the lines with their "No Hindrance" pass. They immediately recognized Lord Roberts toiling up the steep ascent, and halted him to join them.
 "Bobs" lost no time in accepting their invitation, and was delighted with the incident, shaking hands with the detectives, and chatting with the police as they covered the route to the citadel.

BOARD OF WORKS IN A BREEZY SESSION

Lively Passages Between the Aldermen Marked Last Night's Meetings—Committee Talks Street Signs Matter.

At a meeting of the board of works last evening, a somewhat lively discussion took place over the question of private pulls on the part of the aldermen from the different wards. The matter was precipitated by a motion of Ald. Pickett for a sidewalk in Seely street. Ald. Baskin took the position that the chairman and director ought to consult with the aldermen of the wards as to the places in which it was most necessary to spend money in the wards. Ald. Kelley vigorously denounced this as a pernicious doctrine and put himself on record as opposed to private pulls enjoyed by aldermen.
 Ald. Sprout on one stage of the discussion said that the wards represented by the royal cortege appeared, preceded by officials in automobiles, the prince's carriage, guarded by two detachments of the North West Mounted Police, was greeted with cheers, the prince having to rise and salute during the entire distance.
 A picturesque feature was afforded when the royal procession swung into eight, from above in the narrow streets of the lower town, as soon as his carriage came into view the immense crowd on the terrace, as though by a preconcerted arrangement, broke into a tremendous cheer, and the prince yawned in the carriage, waving in fleeting fragments from all directions by the wind in picturesque and imposing confusion.
 The prince inspected the guard, and bade farewell to the officer in charge, and boarded the pinnace from the Indomitable, which ran out to the big cruiser followed by half a dozen other boats from the fleet. As soon as the prince reached the deck of the Indomitable the Royal Standard was hoisted from the foremast, and once again the war-scarred heights of Quebec resounded with the thunderous greetings of three nations to Great Britain's future king. Every warship was fully manned, the masts being lined with bluejackets and marines, waiting motionless as the sharp flashes and noisy smoke marked the band of the Leon Gambetta was heard in the distance playing God Save the King, the Admiral Aubrey took up the refrain, the American warship, the New Hampshire, followed, and then in rhythmic succession the six British battleships, until the music died away up the river. A solitary trumpet then rang out from the deck of the Exmouth, and a second later three tremendous cheers were given by the 10,000 sailors and marines with a volume of sound that reverberated from shore to shore and was echoed by the crowds that lined the terrace. It was practically the farewell of Canada to the prince, as well as that of the fleet, and the ceremony was well worthy of the occasion, the stately ceremonial and warlike salute harmonizing perfectly with the natural amphitheatre, which is so picturesque.

tended that it was necessary that there should be some head to the department who should be independent of the aldermen.
 It was almost equal to saying that he ran the department.
 Ald. Baskin got to his feet at this stage to say that in his opinion the appropriations were not spent to the best advantage. He argued that as the aldermen best knew the needs of their respective wards the director and chairman ought to appoint their own officials.
 The meeting then adjourned till next Friday night at 8 o'clock, when the claim of the White Candy Company for $410, for damages to their wagon and goods, and the recorder's opinion thereon, will be taken up. At this adjournment the contract with the street railway company will be discussed.
