

Open Letter To People of New Brunswick Who Have Sons Or Other Relatives at the Front

Few people who have not had actual experience can conceive the difficulty of tracing the whereabouts of getting in touch with a soldier who has left his home for the present war, after he leaves Canada. The other day a cable came in from an anxious parent as follows:—"I have just heard my son, Lieutenant—, has been seriously wounded at the front. Obtain best medical advice; spare no expense." This cable was at once taken to the Canadian Information Bureau in London, but they were not able to do anything in the matter as they had not the slightest idea of the whereabouts of Lieutenant—.

It is to overcome difficulties like these that I have opened a Soldiers Record Book in the New Brunswick Government Office, 87 Southamptn street, Strand, London, W. C.

If, as soon as a soldier arrives in London, he will come in and leave his address here, I will furnish him with a number of addressed postal cards, and will ask him when he leaves England for the front, which is often some months after he arrives, to send me his address in France with his official number and the unit he may be serving in, which often times is a very different unit to the one to which he was attached to when in England. If he is wounded, I would ask him to get a nurse or any other person who may be attending him to fill in the card so as to keep up posted as to his whereabouts.

All wounded, without any respect to the different units to which they may belong, are gathered up by bearers as soon as it is possible for these bearers to reach them. In the case of the men in the trenches it is only possible to take them away at night; they are then conveyed promiscuously about a mile to the rear of the fighting line to a dressing station, where wounds get their first medical dressing; from there they are taken by ambulance to a hospital about four to seven miles from the dressing station. From there they are taken back to a clearing hospital or some base hospital, such as Boulogne or Rouen, and will later on be brought back to some hospital or convalescent home in England. It will easily be seen that unless a soldier will make the effort to keep in touch with his address from the time he is wounded until he arrives in England it is hopeless for us to convey any messages from his relatives to him.

Trusting that a number of the relatives of soldiers who have not yet left New Brunswick will impress upon them the importance of keeping our record book, and also that the relatives of those boys who have already left Canada will impress on them the importance of registering here. I am, faithfully yours, fight for such a good king and country. When brave soldiers die, sometimes, the Union Jack is wrapped around them. We may say the Union Jack is Canada's flag too, because England is Canada's motherland. Some people say the Union Jack got its name from the sailors who used it most. The Union Jack is no more England's flag than Ireland's and Scotland's. The part farthest away from the mast is called the fly. The British ensign is a red flag with the Union Jack up in the corner next to the flag staff. This flag is also known as the British Merchant Flag.

E. H. TURNBULL,
Representative Province of New Brunswick.

AUSTRIAN MUTINEERS WILL BE EXECUTED

London, July 2.—The Geneva correspondent of the Express sends the first account of the recent mutiny in Admiral von Spain's squadron at the Austrian naval base on the Adriatic at Pola. Most of the crews, he says, were Dalmatians. They overpowered the officers and locked them in cabins, intending to steam out of the harbor at night and deliver the battleships to the Italians.

The plot was discovered, however, and the remainder of the fleet opened fire on the mutineers, who replied with all guns for an hour. Then the white flag was hoisted and the mutineers surrendered.

The battleship Radetzky was badly damaged. All the mutineers probably will be shot.

DAIRYING IN ALBERTA

Regina, July 2.—The product of the thirteen creameries operated by the government during the winter season of 1914-15 aggregated 255,800 pounds, as against 284,838 pounds during the previous winter, an increase of 29,037 pounds or 9 per cent. The extreme shortage of and high prices asked for practically all kinds of feed induced many farmers to sell their stock, so that the increase of 21,000 pounds of butter under such conditions, which were by no means confined to any one section of the country, is very gratifying, and indicates clearly there is no discouragement amongst our dairy farmers. Their prospects are on all sides regarded as satisfactory in every way.

ESSAY ON THE FLAG BY EILEEN MORRISSEY OF THE PROTESTANT ORPHANS' HOME

Among the forty-five children at the Protestant Orphans' Home is Eileen Morrissey, aged eleven, daughter of James W. Morrissey of Moncton. She has been in the Home three years, and as an illustration of what she has learned and how she has progressed there the following essay read by her at the closing exercises on Wednesday will be of great interest:

The Flag.

Everybody belonging to the British Empire knows the colors of the Old Flag, but it is not everybody that knows what they mean or stand for. Red stands for blood; white stands for purity and blue stands for the sea. You often hear us speak of Britain as the "Mistress of the Sea." Now while this terrible war is going on we should respect our flag more than ever. The three colors and crosses put together stand for liberty and justice. The red cross on the white is St. George's Cross, representing England. The white cross on blue field is St. Patrick's Cross, representing Ireland; the red cross on a white field (from corner to corner) is St. Andrew's, representing Scotland. Those who are Canadians should stick up for their flag and country, the same with the English. The Union of England and Scotland, is an important event in the English History, and also concerning the flag. In 1606 Elizabeth, a great queen of England, died and James I came from Scotland to England to take the throne, and from ruled by Scotch kings. After the war of 1706 in Ireland, Pitt saw the only way to save the island from disorder and ruin was to make a union between Great Britain and Ireland, and then Irish members of parliament and by promising the Irish Catholics to recall the Irish laws which were taken away from them as rights as citizens. So on January 1st, 1801, Ireland was united with England.

If a soldier saw the Union Jack lying on the battlefield would he leave it there to be trampled over? No. A good soldier would run and pick it up, even if it were only to risk his life, and I tell you they should be proud to

John Hancock—"Father of the Revolution"

UPON the Declaration of Independence his name may be read without spectacles. His signature was the first subscribed to the world's most famous State document. In the most realistic sense John Hancock pledged his life and his fortune to the cause of the Revolution. He was one of the richest men in the colonies, holding investments in banks, breweries, stores, hotels, and also owning a fleet of vessels. The signature of one of these precipitated the Boston massacre. In Revolutionary days and until his death he was a popular idol. When it was proposed to bombard Boston, though it would have resulted in greater personal loss to him than to any other property owner, he begged that no regard be paid to him because of his financial interests. While Hancock did not sign the Constitution of the United States, he used his great influence in its behalf, which awakened the gratitude of Washington. "He was prepossessing in manner, and passionately fond of the elegant pleasures of life, of dancing, music, concerts, routs, assemblies, card parties, rich wines, social dinners and festivities." Until the end of his life the people of Massachusetts delighted to honor him. In the stirring events preceding the Revolution he was one of the most active and influential members of the Sons of Liberty. To this tireless worker for American Independence Liberty was the very breath of life. He would have frowned upon any legislation which would restrict the natural rights of man, and would have voted NO to prohibition enactments. It was upon the tenets of our National Spoken Word that Anheuser-Busch 58 years ago founded their great institution. To-day throughout the length and breadth of the Free Republic their honest brews are famed for quality, purity, mildness and exquisite flavor. Their brand BUDWEISER has daily grown in popularity until 7500 people are daily required to meet the public demand. Its sales exceed any other beer by millions of bottles.
