"Have some of my tomatoes, old man. Best you ever saw."
"Right, thanks, but just look at my cabbages. Have some. I'm storing most of mine. Know how to do it? I found last year that part or complete outside storage was the most successful way with cabbages. It is madness to bring them into a warm cellar in the early autumn. I know better this year. I'm going to put mine in piles in the garden and cover them with dry leaves. Then early in the winter I'll take 'em in and pile them in the bins or on shelves. It's all right to tie them in bunches of three and suspend them from the ceiling, or another method is to stack and cover them with a larger quantity of leaves. The pitting method is also all right, but I'm not going to try it this year. Well, so long. I must be going. My wife will appreciate those tomatoes. We didn't have any this year."

The Yukon's Silver.

Dawson City, July 21.—A. P. Correspondence.—The Yukon is turning from gold to silver mining. While the value of the former, or its purchasing power, has decreased, that of silver has been doubled. There is great activity in two silver bearing areas tributary to Dawson, the Mayo district on the upper Stewart River and along the Twelve Mile Creek. These fields are 160 miles apart. Silver was discovered in these areas years ago, but no work was ever done.

The Canadian government has dispatched a party of geologists to investigate the prospects of developing the silver mining industry in this section.

PRINCE HAS WARM PRAISE FOR CANADIANS

Arthur of Connaught Has Seen Them at Work on Front

WAS EARLY IN THE FIGHTING

Soldier Prince In St. John Today Says Canada Has Reason to be Proud of Her Men Overseas

In view of the visit of Prince Arthur of Connaught to St. John, the following from the Toronto Star will be read with interest:—

"Having served eighteen months with the Canadians and seen some of the despatching heavy fighting last year at Vimy Ridge, Hill 70 and Passchendaele, I would like to say that in my opinion there is no more formidable fighting force in all Europe at the present day than the Canadian Army Corps," said His Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught in an interview with The Star, en route to Toronto.

"I was on the staff of No. 4 Divisional Headquarters and saw much of the fighting," he continued. "I had to admire the peculiarly aggressive temperament of the Canadians which showed itself, particularly in trench raids and such enterprises. And from my point of view I was delighted to observe that wonderful spirit of good fellowship which exists between the Canadian soldiers and their British comrades. Fighting side by side the British soldiers formed an opinion of admiration for the Canadians which must have far-reaching results."

"Canada has every reason in the world to be proud of her soldiers, and as one who fought with them I know whereof I speak," he said.

Prince Arthur is the possessor of a charming personality and a finely democratic manner which manifested itself frequently during the interview. His personal reminiscences of his visit to Japan and the United States. He was wearing the uniform of the famous Scots Greys, of which he is a major, and he spoke of the work of the Canadians in the war with glowing enthusiasm as of a man praising the work of his closest friends.

Canada in the air also moved him to express admiration, and he said he was pleased to hear that Canada is to have an air force of her own.

"Canadians make fine airmen," he said, "all their national qualities of grit and individual enterprise find scope there, for it is really only in the air there can be any individual enterprise nowadays. Anyone who has been at the front cannot say too much for the flying men and their courage and steadiness, incentive and dash. I saw one airman shot down three times in one day by the enemy, and after coming down for the third time he got up smiling, ready for another try. The air force is the only corps for a young man with ambition and dash."

Commenting on his trip to the United States which preceded the three weeks' visit to Japan, Prince Arthur spoke with enthusiasm of the war spirit manifest there. "I was impressed with the fact that from the president downwards everyone I met was in the war with both feet. I got a glimpse of the ship building which is going on in the Delaware River, and I was impressed with the earnest effort which was being made."

Prince Arthur himself is no idle soldier. He was at the front with his regiment within three weeks of the declaration of war and remained there through all the trying days until the last Hun advance was brought to a close last April.

"This war news today is splendid," he said. "It is what we have been waiting for. Using cavalry on the western front seems very fine to me."

"The Canadian news system is wonderful," he went on. "Here, away in the bush, I have had three news bulletins already today. I have actually got the news of the day hours before I could have got it at headquarters in France."

"Going some, all right," he replied with a smile. Asked as to the work of the women in the war, His Royal Highness declared that women have won a place in England in all walks of life which they are never going to lose. "We simply could not get on without them, and then the 'Waves' as the W. A. A. C. used to be called, they are simply splendid. They call them the 'Quacks' now that they are Queen Mary's Women's Auxiliary Corps," he added.

Referring to his visit to Toronto where he will visit the Royal Air Force schools of instruction, he said, "I am especially interested in the Canadian air force, for the Canadian pilots have fought with such gallantry at the front."

In regard to his visit to Japan, Prince Arthur declared that the war efforts of the Japanese, where both shells and guns are being made for the British, are admirable. The highest order in the gift of the Emperor of Japan, that of the Chrysanthemum, was bestowed by the emperor on Prince Arthur in 1915, and that and other orders were conferred on all the other members of the party. The prince himself received a present from the emperor and from the first lord of the admiralty of Japan—a present of several of the wonderful dwarf trees for which Japan is famous. These trees which are all over 100 years old, are planted in ordinary flower pots and the gnarled stem which is the old normal tree in faithful miniature is not above one inch in thickness.

The people of Japan are most keenly alive to the advantages which they get from the alliance with Great Britain, and they, one and all, appeared to desire that the bonds of friendship should be drawn tighter and the Entente even more closely cemented than it is at the present time."

Of Canada, which he has not visited for six years, Prince Arthur says he finds a rich country now. "The country is very evidently most prosperous, and I would never recognize some of your cities, so changed are they," he said.

"How do you regard the attitude of labor towards the war?" asked the Star. "Isn't that rather a political question," was the reply. "You know we are not allowed to talk politics. Generally speaking, I consider that labor has stood the test of war well and has taken its share of the burdens."

"I like the idea very greatly of your cabinet ministers going to England," he said, in reference to the visit to England of Premier Borden and his colleagues. "I consider their visit of the utmost importance that they may get in touch with the Mother Country and give their views on the empire."

Developing his theme, he said that it appeared to him too much cannot be done to bring together the statesmen of Canada and Australia and South Africa in order that the idea of a united empire might be realized. "We are such a widely scattered family," he said. "Britain will be slow to resume friendly relations with Germany after this war is over, according to Prince Arthur, the soldier, who said that "had Germany fought fairly things would have been different, but as she has fought and sunk to such depths in the sinking of hospital ships and the use of poison gas, the Hun is outside the pale of civilization and must be treated accordingly."

One of the things which much impressed the royal visitor to Japan, was an exhibition of German made goods, very similar to that recently held in Canada to show manufacturers all German makes.

"I am delighted to hear that such exhibitions were held in Canada," he said. "It will have such an effect on the after-war conditions."

Prince Arthur expressed his pleasure in the arrangements for the treatment of wounded and invalids in Canada which he has been shown. "I have been very much impressed by the whole medical arrangements in Canada," he said. "These really wonderful and efficient schools for teaching disabled and returned soldiers new trades are fine. What I most appreciate in this is that it is going to get the returned soldiers jobs at which they can earn money and support themselves and their families."

"In Winnipeg I saw one man who has been taught a new trade and who is actually making more money now than he made at his old trade before the war," he said.

Concluding, Prince Arthur said: "I want to tell you that I have never heard anything but the warmest praise and appreciation of the war work of the Canadians from the British regular officers. That alone ought to mean much to Canada. Like the Canadian troops which come to England on leave we will now have the American troops and a spirit of understanding between the British and the American people is growing up which is of the greatest importance to both."
