

STUDIES.

The course of study comprises, besides an Elementary Department, three Departments, viz.: The Commercial, the Classical, and the Philosophical.

Since it is most important that every Catholic of education should possess a thorough knowledge of our religion, all possible care is taken to make this branch complete, and students have every opportunity of learning well the grand moral and dogmatic principles of our Holy Church. Christian Doctrine forms an essential subject in all the Departments. Besides a special class each week, some time is devoted to it every day.

Students are required to pass a satisfactory examination before a certificate is given.

As a number of our young men are anxious to enter the various professions of law, medicine and teaching, attention will henceforth be devoted to the special preparation of students wishing to take the university matriculation and other similar examinations of the Educational Department. To fulfil this demand a special class has been formed, which is known as the Matriculation Class.
