CURVE BALL RESPONSIBLE FOR FAMOUS ATHLETE'S RELEASE

By BILLY EVANS.

Ten years ago Jim Thorpe, the famous Indian, was hailed as the greatest all-around athlete in the country.

The other day the wires carried the news item that Jim Thorpe had been released by the Portland club of the Pacific Coast League to make room for younger blood.

It was in 1912 at Stockholm that Jim Thorpe in the Olympic games won the decathlon championship, the hardest test in all-around ability that track and field sports offer.

Later Thorpe was stripped of all the honors won at Stockholm as an amateur, when it was discovered that he had accepted a very small salary for playing professional ball in a tank-town circuit in the south.

The release of Thorpe by Portland probably marks the passing of the great athlete from the world of sport. At least it will take him very much out of the limelight.

HARVARD AND YALE CREWS
BATTLE ON OLD THAMES TODAY

New London, Conn., June 22.—Tradition that has come down through the years will slip into the Old Thames tomorrow alongside the crews of Yale and Harvard, the two most famous of the American rowing teams, as they lift their shells into the stream whose ripples will hum to the Atlantic tomorrow night the praise of the victor in the fifty-fifth inter-varietal regatta championship of the eight-oared crews.

As compelling and majestic as their yearly football game is the annual regatta of Yale and Harvard, made so by the full hearts that strain with as much nerve ashore as under the tanned breasts at the oars. As exhilarating as the daring and the dexterity yell that the frosty winds of autumn whisk across the gridiron is the screeching of whistles and the clang of bells on the variety of craft that is jumbled together somehow to night along the lanes the crews will traverse on the morrow.

In place of the battered quarter-backs barking cryptic signals behind the living hedge formed by the line-men, will be miniature men seated in the sterns of the feather-like shells pleading to eight-un-browed, sinewy forms, sliding to and fro, while their long sweeps dip into the water, respond to the tug and the shell shoot forward another rod. Tradition says that the only answer to the coxswain's plea is a lighter clenching of the jaws of the oarsmen—and sometimes a little more speed.

Tonight New London, as grim usually as any New England habitat of small-folk, is gay with the fore-runners of regatta throngs that will pour in all day in automobiles, on teams, trolleys and pleasure craft, made welcome by the natives of the old seaport who apparently take as much joy in listening to the rumble as the visitors take in making it. The crews, segregated from their admirers, are priming their nerves for the test that comes only to the few.

The Yale-Harvard regatta has been an annual affair—with periodic interruptions—since 1852, and so determinedly have the crews of both institutions fought in it that both have won 37 varsity races, alternately the last four times, following the period of supremacy that the Crimson enjoyed in the early years of the century. Yale won last year and Harvard the year before.

The result cannot be forecasted by resorting to the performance of either varsity crew this year, and prognosticating is made doubly difficult by the change in rowing methods that Yale, sensationally made a month ago, depositing the head coach, Jim Cordery, teacher of the English style, and replacing him with his brother, George Cordery, mentor of the American style, who was the tutor of the freshmen crew.

Both Yale and Harvard have been defeated this year by the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton in either dual or triangular regattas. Tonight the critics are pointing to the victory of Princeton over Harvard in the race won by the Navy, May 6 in which the Crimson came in eighth, the Yale team the winner and two lengths at the stern of the Tiger. Princeton also finished second in a three-cornered news was heralded from one end of the United States to the other. No other player who ever came to the majors was pre-announced quite so widely as Thorpe.

Thorpe was a graceful player, he developed into a fine fielder and had an excellent arm. He was fast on the base.

Weak at Bat
Jim's one glaring weakness as a ball player was at the bat. He could murder a fast ball. When he hit one in his groove, and got those muscular shoulders of his behind the drive, the ball would certainly travel. At one time he achieved considerable reputation as a home-run hitter.

The old curve ball was the trouble some one for Jim. He just couldn't resist slicing away at the curve. As a result pitchers began to feed Jim on a curve ball diet which drove him from the majors and slowed him down in the minors.

Thorpe was a colorful athlete. One of his type bobs up in the athletic world once in about every hundred years.

Landis Has A New Hat

Baseball Commissioner Landis, who is as famous for his felt lids as he is for canning Ruth, has a new straw hat.

The fact became gossip after the Judge had thrown the first ball at the Cardinal-Pirate opener.

He doffed his steam-heated sheep-wool and placed Rogers Hornsby's cap on his dome.

"Goah, that's a hot lid, said Hornsby, 'why don't you get a hay kelly?'

"Nobody gives me one," said Landis. "I've got a couple coming for home runs, you can have one," sings back Rogers, and the commissioner now wears a new straw hat.

Crews All Ready.
New London, Conn., June 22.—Enshrined with two centuries of New England tradition, this port, famous the world around for former whaling glories, tonight cast aside conservatism and donned regatta regalia. Annual rowing regatta, the Yale-Harvard regatta, will be rowed down stream this year, will start at the railroad bridge and end at Bartlett's Cove.

Four miles up the river the oarsmen of the rival universities rested in darkness and quiet for the test of rowing skill, courage and endurance twenty-four hours away. The final practice was passed and the last regatta detail completed. Unless weather conditions prevent, the freshmen and junior varsity races will be rowed down stream over a two mile course at 11 and 11.30 respectively, daylight saving time, tomorrow forenoon. At 6.30 p. m. the varsity four mile race will be started up stream, the two eights rowing from the railroad bridge to Bartlett's Cove.

CANADIAN ASTRONOMER
FEARS TO TALK OF MARSDr. Klotz Wary After Failure of Humorous Sally.

New York, June 22.—Dr. Otto Klotz, director of the Dominion Observatory at Ottawa, returned yesterday by the White Star liner Adriatic from attending scientific meetings in Europe, including the International Astronomical Union at Rome. Naturally the chief question put to him was about the comparative nearness of Mars to the earth on Sunday.

Dr. Klotz greeted his inquisitors with a look of mock alarm, and said: "Mars is a sore subject with me. You see, I expressed some high flown opinions that I thought were humorous some years ago about a town planning campaign in Canada. I faked a special wireless from Mars telling how they planned towns out there and how they sold fine brands of wine and beer manufactured overnight in Martian department stores."

"Some of the astronomers took me seriously and others did not, but all fit me ironically, sarcastically and otherwise, keeping it up about a year. Therefore, I trust you will excuse me if I decline to talk about those people out there on the planet, whom I really do not know anything about."
