

A NATION'S IDOL.

ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY HAS ARRIVED AT NEW YORK.

He is Two Days Ahead of Time, But Received a Warm Welcome and is Glad to be Home—Many Callers on the Olympia, Including Sir Thomas Lipton.

New York, Sept. 28.—Admiral George Dewey arrived of New York at dawn and the Olympia is now anchored in American waters in the light of Sandy Hook.

The first shout of welcome was from the pilots and crew of Pilot No. 7, fifteen miles south of the Hook light.

It happened to be Pilot Peterson's turn and at 5.30 a. m. he was past around the Olympia and brought her around the Hook and into the lower bay.

The admiral stroked the head of a tawny-haired dog, the Chow dog of the Chinese breed that appears in the illustrated interviews with the admiral.

"I almost sadden me," he said, "to see what my people are doing for me. The pride and gratification is immense and I did not know, I did not really perceive until this morning, the splendid welcome that my countrymen are giving me.

"I cannot stand for any interview giving my opinions on political subjects and the admiral's opinion on the subject of the harbor was to be given to the press.

"I am sorry that I am ahead of the schedule. The Olympia has been steaming at the uniform rate of 10 knots an hour since we left Gibraltar.

"The admiral's first business was to send an officer ashore with telegrams for the navy department, Mayor Van Wyck and General B. Bertheloff.

"No, you're welcome to that if anybody can drink it," replied Sir Thomas Lipton, who was the owner of the cup.

"There was no answer made to the message, but a fifteen minutes later the Olympia steam whistle was sounded.

"I could not stop them," cried Admiral Dewey, waving his hand at Sir Thomas Lipton, who was the owner of the cup.

with the visitors, Admiral Dewey invited the city's representatives to his cabin. After seating his callers in a hall circle about him Admiral Dewey also took a chair.

Just at the age when young women are particularly fond of dainty feet Nature comes gallantly to the rescue and shapes their feet smaller than they were as growing girls.

When they get older, however, and the feet become flat, it is a fact noted by observing shoemakers, who do not at all regret a circumstance that helps make business brisk.

It was recently announced by a well known New York medical man that the reason Americans suffer so much from dyspepsia is because they do not know how to sit correctly.

Now comes a surgeon well known in Philadelphia who puts forward the suggestion that appendicitis is more common in America than in other countries because of the Yankee habit of habitually sitting with one leg thrown over the other.

Many causes have been quoted for appendicitis, but none have satisfactorily explained why men should more frequently suffer from the disease than women, or why Yankees should suffer from it far more frequently than others.

The habit of sitting with the legs crossed, says the surgeon, "restricts the action of the digestive apparatus, especially of the lower intestine, and causes stagnation of the contents and stasis of the opening of the vermiform appendix, making it possible for obstructions to reach the latter organ and thus causing appendicitis."

Directions to reach the latter organ and thus causing appendicitis. The appendix is only loosely attached to the caecum, the portion where the small intestine joins the large intestine, and there is always some half digested food in the caecal bag.

Another theory that has been advanced to account for the frequency of appendicitis in America is the chewing gum habit, but as women chew gum more frequently than men, and men get appendicitis eight times more for quantity than women, this theory finds few advocates.
