

more vividly than ever, we are thankful to God for what has been accomplished through the instrumentality of our representatives scattered over three continents.

NORTHWEST CANADA.

In Northwest Canada our missionaries are labouring in five different dioceses, as follows:

Rupert's Land.—The Rev. R. F. Nie, of Oswald, supplies nine stations, having to drive forty-five miles to give eight of these alternate services on Sunday. At one of these there is a congregation of half-breeds. During the year thirteen candidates were confirmed. In view of the great need of this diocese Mr. Nie asks that the friends of the C. C. M. A. will not drop their generous support.

Calgary.—The Rev. E. F. Hockley, of St. Paul's mission, of the Blood Reserve, was, during part of the year, acting as superintendent of the whole mission owing to Mr. Swainson's return to England, but on the appointment of Rev. Arthur de B. Owen to take charge of the Kissock Homes, Mr. Hockley resumed his evangelistic work at Red Crow's Camp. On July 12th, he was married to Miss Nellie Parker, of Toronto.

In response to a request from Archdeacon Tims, Miss Bella Rutherford was examined as to fitness, and being approved, was sent to this mission, to act as matron and nurse in the Girls' Home. She has twenty-five Indian girls of various ages under her care.

Athabasca.—The Rev. Charles Weaver, for whom this Association receives and forwards contributions, is encouraged by his year's work at Wapuskow. In his new home there are now seventeen Indian children.

"We are laying the foundation of the mission here," he says. This is being literally done in a physical sense, and we are trying hard to do it in a spiritual sense.

"Our faith is built on nothing less Than Jesus' Blood and Righteousness."

The Association has also agreed to receive and bear the expense of training at Wycliffe College, Toronto, a young man for future work in this Diocese under Bishop Young.

Mackenzie River.—The centres at which our missionaries work are at the extreme north and the extreme south of this vast diocese.

St. Peter's Mission, Hay River, is the southern station. On the first of last February, Rev. T. J. Marsh left for a brief furlough, and after walking seven hundred miles and driving two hundred more reached Edmonton on March 12th. His stay amongst us was short, but it was not without advantage to his work, for in June he returned with a bride, taking with him also Mr. Stanley Soanes as a lay-helper. With Miss Anna Marsh and Miss Tims assisting in the Indian School, St. Peter's Mission is now the best equipped as well as the brightest station, according to the Bishop, in the diocese. The missionaries were much encouraged by an aged chief catching a faint glimmer of the Gospel light.

Far to the north of this, within the Arctic circle, is St. Matthew's Mission, Peel River. It will be remembered that although this station has long been
