GARFIELD BROTHERS' JOINT BANK ACCOUNT TOTALS 98 CENTS

Dispelled by Police.

Ever since the days of Capt, Kidd, men who have been alleged to be con-nected with the commission of hold-ups have been said to have much hidups have been said to have much hidden treasure.

Soon after Norman and Denton Garfield were arrested on robbery and murder charges, stories were circulated that they had some money put away. It was believed that they had put some money in the bank, and it was agreed that they would not use their own names when depositing it.

Police got busy and investigated the matter. It was found that they did have a joint bank account under the name of Weston, but stories of a large amount being in their possession were without foundation. Their bank book showed that they could write a check for only 98 cents.

TEACHERS' SALARIES UP FOR DISCUSSION AT MEETING TODAY

Rumors of Hidden Treasure No. 1 Committee, Board of Education, Will Thresh Affairs Thoroughly.

Teachers' salaries will undoubtedly form the feature subject of the deliberations of No. 1 committee of the board of education at its regular monthly meeting this afternoon, but wasther any definite decision will be reached is rather problematical, owing to the varying views held by the trustees on the matter. Efforts will, however, be made, it was stated by a member of the committee this morning, to reach a tentative revision of the salary list for presentation to a special meeting of the board for final action.

Until this matter of teachers' salaries is settled the board cannot prepare its estimates, the final date for which has been set by the city council about the middle of the month.

nore than 20 years of age, but one was considerably taller than the other. Neither of the pair wore an overcoat and asked to be shown some coats as soon as they entered the store. When Mr. Wolf turned around to show them. one of the men cried "Hands up." Mr. Wolf believes the gun, which they pointed at him, was not loaded, as he refused to put his hands up, and they repeated their order several times. Seeing that he was not frightened by their threat to shoot, the man with the gun said to the other, "Tie his hands."

The two men undertook to tie Mr. Wolf to a post in the store and succeeded in getting the strap fastened to one hand, but watching his opportunity, he struck one of the men a forcible blow and made a dash for the street door. He was stopped at the door, and one of the men snapped the Yale lock fast, but still struggling with his two assailants, Mr. Wolf got the lock unfastened, the door opened and had one arm and shoulder outside, when he was struck twice with the butt of the gun.
Dazed he fell to one side for a moment, and the two hold-up men dashed out. Quickly recovering, Mr. Wolf ran after them and followed around the corner of Adelaide street to Marshall. They turned into Marshall, which is a poorlylighted street, and their pursuer los track of them. In the struggle at the door of the store one of them lost his cap which was a new one, but so far as the police are aware, from the trade mark, a cap not manufactured or sold
