REDMOND'S DEATH

He regarded the work of the convention and its outcome as fraught with the most vital interests of the Irish people and the whole empire.

The House of Commons paid tribute to the memory of Mr. Redmond when Premier Lloyd George and various party leaders expressed their sense of the loss the House had sustained.

Mr. Lloyd George said the House was shocked profoundly by the unexpected news of the death of one of its oldest and most respected and eminent members.

Mr. Redmond had been a member of the House for thirty-seven years and during that period, the Premier added, he had shown in the esteem, admiration and affection of the members of all parties.

That was a great thing to say of any member, Mr. Lloyd George continued, but it was the greatest thing to say of a man who had been engaged in one of the fiercest controversies of our time.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Innes are convalescent, the former very slightly, the latter very encouragingly.

Our congratulations to Mr. C. Robertson, who yesterday passed another milestone.

CAPT. KENDALL

Commander of the 10th Galopians. He was in command of the Montrose when Dr. Crippen, the wife murderer, was arrested on board and later of the Empress of Ireland when it was lost in the St. Lawrence.

He was in command of the Montrose when Dr. Crippen, the wife murderer, was arrested on board and later of the Empress of Ireland when it was lost in the St. Lawrence.

The Westminister Gazette says: "There is peculiar irony in the stroke of fate which so often repeats itself in the life of a man whose life work is on the eve of accomplishment.

The Full Mail Gazette regards the death of Mr. Redmond as a loss to the empire, and adds: "It should bring an admission to all Britons of the part which rests upon themselves to play in shaping their country's future."

Mr. Redmond brought the fulfillment of all its legitimate ambitions so near that only a gray jack of responsible qualities of true democracy can detract the promise of success.

The papers dwell upon Mr. Redmond's career, his love and hard work for Ireland, his sturdy patriotism when Great Britain found it necessary to enter the war in 1914, just at the moment his old political opponents were threatening civil war in Ireland over the bill which he played the largest part in bringing about.

From the beginning of his political career, Mr. Redmond always stood by his friends, a fact he displayed when he joined the minority Nationalists in supporting Parnell in the dark days for which he received his first reward of leadership when the party was re-united.

Then until the end, it was a continuing fight for Irish reforms, many of which Mr. Redmond introduced the British Government to introduce.

Since the war Mr. Redmond had more than the usual number of sorrows to contend with. Besides the death of his brother, Major William H. K. Redmond, who was killed in France, the loss of his daughter, Mrs. W. T. Power, who died in New York was a great blow to him.

While politically the Easter rising in Dublin threatened to endanger his work of forty years, his last speech in the House of Commons was a plea for the reconciliation and settlement of the differences among the Irish factions.

There is most catch in this section of the country that all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable.

Dr. Chenevix Tamm, who has cured thousands of cases of this disease, has issued an announcement confirming previous reports that the Argentine Government would be reorganized.

BANK CLERKS MUST ENLIST

Central Appeal Judge Has Rendered Comprehensive Judgment

CALL UP 834 MARCH 15

Remainder of Some 2,000 to Report for Duty in Three Drafts.

Ottawa, March 6.—The need of men for the army is emphasized by Mr. Justice Duff in his judgment declining exemption to bank clerks in Category "A" under which 2,020 bank employes will be called up.

In determining the number of men to be furnished immediately by the banks, the judgment reads, "The Central Appeal Judge has reviewed carefully the position of each bank and has taken into account several considerations, amongst others the number of male employees in the banks, the proportion of these to the total staff of the banks, the extent to which the staff has been depleted in the past by voluntary enlistment and the special situation of each bank in regard to the distribution of its staff amongst its branches."

Contribution Not Unreasonable. After stating how the first call will be distributed among the various banks, Mr. Justice Duff continues: "The immediate withdrawal of men from their posts for the military forces of the nation, which some of the banks are thus called upon to meet, is larger than their officials who appeared before the Central Appeal Judge considered to be reasonably feasible."
