THE BATTLEFIELD.

dth Escapes Through Whie

there is a "little cherub who sits up aloft" with the be-neficent object of taking care of "poor Jack," it must be equally true that some other cherub is charged with the care of Tommy Atkins when the bullets are raining on him thick as hail.

Tommy's guardian cherub must have been especially alert and busy when he was charged with the protection of Corporal Laurie, of the Seaforth Highlanders, in the Egyptian campaign of a year or two ago. Probably no soldier who faced an enemy has ever been made the target of so many bullets as this gallant corporal, and certainly there is no record of any man escaping so much peril unscathed.

In one engagement Corporal Laurie was struck in one part or other of his clothing and accoutrements by no few-er than 162 bullets, and emerged from the fight literally in "rags and tatters," without losing a single drop of the blood he was ready to shed for his country. On describing his experiences, the Corporal wrote: "I went through the battle with my clothes riddled with builets. Both of my shoes were torn to pieces by bullets; almost at the same moment a bullet smashed the wooden stock of my gun; the thongs of my bag were cut in two; my water gourd, containing my tea, had been drilled, my sleeves were in holes, and I heard on my heimet something like a hailstorm. Sword in hand, I followed my comrades, and was quickly engaged with two hideous 'niggers,' who finished my undressing by slicing my jacket with their lances; and a bullet tickled the top of my hand enough to bruise it. In short, when we re-formed companies it was discovered that my uniform, includingshoes, helmet and accoutrements, had received 162 wounds. I was naked, and marched along, dragging my tatters with me."

It is little wonder that this human target, with such a record of "outers," was nicknamed "the invulnerable." At the battle of Modder River Sergeant Penderend was struck by three bullets in less than as many minutes, and escaped practically unharmed. "First," he says, "a shot glanced off the side of my boot and struck my rifle just in front of my face, filling my eyes with dust and splinters. rose up a little, when another shot struck the middle finger of my left hand. I got on my knees, when a bullet struck me fair in the chest on the buckle of my haversack, breaking it through the centre and causing a slight puncture of the skin and bruising my chest. I have been congratu-lated on being the luckiest beggar in my battalion. One of the American soldiers in the trenches before Manila had a still more astonishing escape from sudden extinction. One bullet grazed the top of his right ear, a few seconds later another took a microscopic slice from the lobe of the left ear, while a third bullet flashed along the top of his head, removing the hair in a perfectly straight, narrow line. As the soldier put it in a letter to his parents, "It was very kind of them to part my hair so beautifully for me, and it will save me a lot of trouble for some time to

One of the most remarkable of recorded experiences was that of a corporal in the late frontier campaign in India. After several hours of fighting, during which the bullets had been fiy-ing thickly around him, he was congratulating himself that he had not even been touched, when on removing his helmet he say a small perforation in front which could only have been made by a bullet. On turning the helmet round to look for the point of exit of the bullet, he found not one but two holes, and could only arrive at the seemingly incredible conclusion that two separate bullets must have struck his helmet at exactly the same point and made two separate openings for their exit. Each bullet in its passage through the helmet must have gone, literally, almost within a hair's breadth of the top of b's head. One of the men wounded at Wynberg had a still narrower escape from death. A bullet entered one temple and came out at the other; and yet the man has made a complete recovery, and suffers nothing from the terrible wound beyond an occasional head-ache.—Tit Bits.

Ants as Fighters.

All ants that are not from the same nest seem to be deadly enemies, but while an ant will do what he can to put to death a stranger, he does not seem to take a corresponding delight in aiding his friends, as is shown by the following experiment:

A scientist, in order to test the affection of ants belonging to the same nest, took six of them and imprisoned them in a small bottle, covering it with a piece of coarse mesh muslin. Their fellows paid no particular atten-tion to the prisoners, but when the experiment was repeated, substituting, however, six ants of a rival tribe, their enemies swarmed around the bottle and after something like a week through persistent effort they succeed ed in eating their way through the muslin. Two ants were found dead, evidently proving that they had been put to death, while the others probab-

TETTER ON HANDS CURED I had been troubled with tetter for several years. At times my hands would be sere all over, so that I could not use them at all, and were so tender that clear water, even, smarted like fire, and it spread over arms, neck, and face. I had been treated by physicians, but without benefit, when I began the Cuticuna remedics. I found relief before I had taken the first bottle. I used three or four bottles of Cuticuna RESOLVENT, one cake of CUTICUNA SOAP, and one box of CUTICUNA (ointment), and it has never troubled me since.

Every art is in large part a handi-craft. An excellent judge of paint-ing may be but a very bad painter self, or no painter at all. The popular view of the relation of d to human character and conduct is marked in many a familiar expression. We speak of there being "bad blood" between people at enmity, of "blue blood" as indicating ancestry, of "black blood" as describing a treacherous nature, and in many another phrase mark our belief that in the mental, moral and physical man, "the blood is the life." The one basis of a healthful, happy and useful life is pure blood. With the blood pure, disease has no permanent lodging place in the system. For this reason the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery rids the body of diseases which have their origin in impurity of the blood. It absolutely purifies the blood, carrying off the waste and pois-onous matter, increasing the action of the blood making glands, and build-ing up the body by supplying the blood in quantity and quality such as is es-sential to a condition of health. It cures ninety-eight people out of every hundred who give it a fair trial.
