A Song of Trust.

I cannot always see the way that leads
To heights above;
I sometimes quite forget he leads me on
With hands of love.
But yet I know the path will lead me to
Immortal's land,
And when I reach the summit I shall know
I understand.

I cannot always trace the onward course
My ship must take;
But looking backward, I behold afar
The shining sea.
I cannot always know the hidden helm
That steers my fate,
I cannot always know the hidden hand
That guides my fate.

But I am learning with His help to trust
That one by one,
And when I cannot understand, to say
They will be done.

Wolfville's Charms.

FITTING DISCIBLES BY A FORMER SON WHO IS STILL LOYAL TO THE HONOR OF HIS YOUTH.

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN:

DEAR SIR,—As one who holds the town of his youth in deep affection, I feel impelled to raise the gaze of battle very obviously thrown down by your recent anonymous correspondence that made some critical observations on the appearance of the town. With his concrete criticism of specific conditions, of which at this distance I know nothing, I have no quarrel, nor yet with the fact of his making criticisms, for only by self-examination and the recognition of deficiencies can a community improve. Yet from the reading of the above communication, I have an entire stranger, a conception totally at variance with Wolfville's clean and charming personality would have been left upon my mind. To be so fully pulled up is dangerous because it too often marks the ceasing of desire to improve, but to adopt the attitude of self-deprecation is just as much a menace to the wholesome personality of a community, for it savors of the hateful gospel of gloom. When a man or a community is doing pretty well, and gives no recognition to that fact, he or it has degenerated to the grade of a slacker.

So what has been affirmed many times before and in better phrase by others, may, perhaps, be permitted from a clearly biased witness, and that is the statement that Wolfville is one of the cleanest looking and most attractive towns in Canada. So far as the experience of one man goes, at any rate, its man-made charms, apart from those of scenic environment, cannot be duplicated west of the Great Lakes until you come to Nelson. The orderly appearance of the town, the standard of architecture, the well kept streets, are assets that not every townsmen, perhaps appraises at their full value. To a tourist, the houses, lawns, vine bowers, and bits of orchard flanking the streets, are just as many points of attraction. The college grounds, more particularly the great willows, appeal to the city man. One might go on indefinitely with this enumeration.

It may interest the people of Wolfville to learn the opinion of another man who has been a newspaper man for twenty years, who is a keen and accurate observer, and whose opinion, unaided, may be taken upon judgment. After hearing from me of Nova Scotia and Wolfville for about eight years, he went to England for the convention, and arranged to spend some time in Nova Scotia on his return. Last fall he passed through Nelson on his way to the coast. He then pronounced Wolfville, not only the most attractive town that he had encountered in Nova Scotia, but he stated that he did not know its peer in Canada. The points that especially appealed to him, apart from the charm of situation, were the regularity with which the town was laid-out, the uniform standard that seemed to prevail of neat and attractive dwellings—from which there seemed to be no departure—the clean streets, and the generally progressive atmosphere. He also stated—and I hope this will be borne out by the intelligent looking and attractive young people, of both sexes, entirely apart from the college community. On second thought, I am not so sure that he can entirely escape the charge of bias. If one may give advice without being voted impertinent, I would say that Wolfville's special opportunity to develop its personality on the town which it is so well started.

Every hint of rusticity in one's attire to the tourist, who comes from Boston or just such an atmosphere. Who would walk on a concrete sidewalk if he could have one of cinders, resilient and restful to the sole? Weed out the picket fences, and if fences one must have, adopt the low faced wire pattern—but hedges are far better. Wolfville's roads should be as perfect as they can be made. The straightening of Main street at Mud Bridge, regarding which there is a note in your current issue, should go without saying. I do not know just what the proposition is regarding improvements at that point, but I have often reflected that there were possibilities for a pretty little park on the upper side of the bridge—artificial lake, emerald turf, gravel paths, utilizing the clump of spruces now existing and adding shade trees. Liberty with fountains, whether in a park or that description, or at available points about the town, is always a good investment. Happily, a community that is a delight to the eye of the traveller is a pleasant community for those composing its membership, and in this case, good business and the joy of living go hand in hand.

Before I close, I must not forget the community that now claims me—Nelson, Aphrodite of the Mountain Lakes. There is not a city of equal natural charm, I verily believe, in Canada. Nature has here her citadel, the majestic lakes, the white-capped Selkirk, the waters, the populous wilderness, all pay tribute to the capital of the mountains. Midway between Alberta and the coast,

Nelson is half as high above sea-level as Calgary, and the air is neither rare nor heavy but has the tonic qualities of the elixir. Neither the torrential rains of the coast, nor the aridity of the dry belts, are known in Nature's economy in the West. Kootenay, for the high ocean breezes discharge their moisture against the intersecting mountains. The lake margins and the valley bottoms are clothed in a fruitful soil that produces Gravenstein even equal to those of the Annapolis Valley, and about one hundred other varieties of apples, as well as all temperate fruits. On every hand, fruit communities have sprung up, and in any part of the lake region the air is now heavy with the scent of apple blossoms. Nelson is one of the great water power points of the Dominion, and almost within ear-shot the two mighty Falls of Bonington thunder in perpetual mist. In addition to these gifts of Nature, Nelson is the key to transportation in the mountains, with eight rail and water routes, and the interior tourist capital. Almost all the metalliferous mining of British Columbia is tributary to the Crown West Pass route, and naturally Nelson is the mining capital of the province. That it is the commercial capital of the Kootenay, with its supporting population of 60,000 souls without statement. The new short route to the coast, now being built, will make the Crown West Pass route the main line of the C. P. R., with consequent enhancement of Nelson. In another year or so, Nelson will be accessible to the world by rail.

For their educative value, I will never regret the years I spent on the prairie, but I certainly missed some of the joy of living by not coming at once to the glorious Kootenay. When thence comes west for a holiday, they are wasting time if they merely stop on the plains. If they extend their outing to the flower-land in the mountains, they will find plenty of their own kind here—thousands who have eaten of the lotus, and whose energies here find magnificent outlet and handsome reward.

Two Years' Suffering.

BROUGHT ON BY A SEVERE STRAIN—
HOW A CURE WAS FOUND.

Mr. Joseph Stevens, Rosemount, Ont., is one of the great "lost" who, continually sound the strains of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he has much reason to do so as they brought him from suffering to health, after he had spent much money and two years of time treating with other treatments. Mr. Stevens tells his experience as follows:—In the month of January, 1908, while working in a logging camp at Creston, B. C., I got my back badly injured. I suffered a great deal of pain and was almost helpless. I tried plasters, thinking they would help me, but they were useless. I tried different remedies equally without benefit. Then I was advised to try electrical treatment and did so for a time, but without getting any permanent relief, and I began to look as though I would be a permanent cripple. Then I was advised to undergo treatment with a specialist at Spokane, Wash. After examining me he said I was in a very bad state and that the trouble was likely to result in Bright's disease. However, he told me he felt sure he could cure me. At a heavy expense I was under his treatment for three months, but did not get the least benefit. I was almost in despair; work was plentiful and wages good, but I could not work for I was quite unable to bend. I was in this condition for about two years, when my brother who was with me all the time, came across one of Dr. Williams' pamphlets and read of the great work Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were doing. He urged me to try them, but I thought it would be useless to spend money after all the other treatment had failed. He insisted, however, and I got a dozen boxes of the Pills and I began to take them. Before I had used half a dozen boxes I felt better, and I continued taking the Pills until every vestige of the pain was gone, and I could raise my hands above my head and then bend until I

America's View of Our Banking System.

The United States Investor, one of the strongest financial papers in New York says:—

We should say that Canada is fast developing conditions which will cause the emergence of a Canadian T. R. In at least one class of business concentration of control into fewer and even fewer hands is going on rapidly.

But in banking is it that we find the tendency toward centralization most pronounced. This is interesting to us Yankers, for on our side of the international boundary line we are inclined to think that a money trust is the most to be dreaded of all monopolies. We have an idea that it is the mother trust of them all.

That Canada should witness with so little concern a development which would throw the United States into paroxysms of terror seems to us difficult of explanation.

It is worth noting, too, that the total assets of the new combination (Yankers and Royals) will be only about $167,000,000. There are several institutions in this country that have a larger aggregate of funds to handle than that. Reason for becoming wild with terror is hardly to be found in the magnitude of this figure. What does offer rather more food for thought and perhaps some ground for real apprehension is that this bank and two others will now possess between them more than three-eighths of the total resources of all the chartered banks in Canada.

If the resources of three other somewhat smaller banks are added, the six institutions will possess three-fifths of all the resources of the Canadian banks. It may be that there is no reason for alarm in such concentration. The Canadians are not yet showing any particularly wild state of terror over the matter. To the average American, however, the recent consolidation of banks in Canada will appear to contradict the remark often made that Canada has the best banking system in the world and the United States the worst. It is at least true that our banks are not so closely concentrated. On our side of the line, the money trust, if there be such an institution, controls no fraction of all the banking resources of the country as any one of the three largest Canadian banks controls.

"Knack"

"Knack" is not needed to make good coffee every time. Follow the directions in each sealed tin of Red Rose Coffee; and in six minutes the small crushed grains give you the full strength and brisk flavor of this choice coffee. There is no dust, so Red Rose Coffee requires no "settling." No chaff, so no bitter taste. You will surely like Red Rose Coffee.

An Auto Lesson.

The farmer may not venture the automobile, but he must admit that although the auto teaches others extravagance, it has taught him a very valuable lesson in economy.

Everybody knows how plant lice or aphids overrun and destroy the plants and how the sole protection against plant lice has, therefore, made patent powder more or less costly.

But of late years farmers have noticed that while all the plants in the field or garden were covered with aphids all the roadside growths, white with dust from autos, had not a single aphid on them.

Hence an experiment. Turnips, peas and cabbages were coated with ordinary dust instead of costly powder. Result: disappearance of all insect parasites.

The auto, in a word, has taught the farmer that dust, which coats plants, will protect his plant from plant lice and other pests just as completely as the most expensive powder can.—New York Tribune.

Extraordinary Name.

A funny incident once convulsed a Lancashire court with laughter when Rev. Mr. Wood was examined as witness. Upon giving his name, Ottiwell Wood, the judge, addressing the witness, said: "Pray, how do you spell your name, Mr. Wood?"

The old parson, with a twinkle in his eye, replied: "O, double T, I double U, E double L, double U, double O D."

Upon which the astonished lawyer said down his pen, saying it was the most extraordinary name he had ever met in his life, and after vainly trying several times to master it declared he was unable to record it.
