

A Real World Shortage of Paper, With Canada the Only Country to be Depended Upon

Likely to Be a Stringency in the European Market for Years to Come, and it is Feared that Many of the Smaller Newspapers Must Go to Wall.

(By Canadian Associated Press.) London, April 25.—(By Mail)—Lord Burnham, proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph, speaking at a luncheon here of newspaper directors, said: "There was at present what was termed a paper famine, due to a real world shortage. What was happening was that the demand for paper was so great that it was not possible to get it from the British Empire, we ought to be able to draw much more largely than we do on the output of the great Dominions beyond the seas."

"It was difficult to see, with the increasing use of paper for all sorts of purposes, how the supply could be made up, unless the resources, particularly of the Dominion of Canada, were utilized to a far greater degree. There was not likely to be for many years any effective competition from Germany in the paper trade. The mere fact that Italy had had to draw upon the west for its paper, instead of upon Austria, had contributed to the present scarcity and tended to raise prices to their present level. It was up to the leaders in the paper making industry to do all they could to interest the whole commercial community in the development of our resources in what was a prime necessity of civilized life. It would be their duty soon to set themselves in downright earnest to developing our paper resources of the Empire."

"For years to come there was likely to be a stringency which would react more prejudicially on the whole of our national life. No newspaper man could look without a good deal of fear at the coming years, which were likely to prove almost too heavy for smaller people to bear, and which might mean the end of many publications that had had an undoubted value as contributing to the efficiency and knowledge of the people, and might seriously handicap free access to information."

Mr. Angus Campbell wishes to extend his sincere thanks to those who so kindly assisted him during his recent trouble in the loss of his home by fire.
