accidents occur, and as for that word 'lay,' but few people there are who could hardly be 'lovely,' but a rose could be. And that 'got.' It seems she,' 'him' and 'her' are really the most troublesome words in English language to most people. I was shocked to hear a society girl once say, 'Mrs. Blank has invited she and to her home.' They seem to be afraid of the words 'her' and 'me. To say 'she asked her and me' sounds queer, but is correct. How many pareless people say, 'He acked for you and I.' The word 'ain, ' is fast growing in disfavor. Few know that the word 'aggravate' does not mean 'provoke' or 'irritate,' and that they must not say a 'new beginning.' We expect a visitor, but we 'suspect he is sick. A man dies 'oi' a disease not 'from,' and to say 'do like I'do' should be 'as I do.' The word 'pre ventive' is to be used instead of 'preventative,' and the term 'I mistake,' nstead of 'I am mistaken.' So one could go on indefinitely in the line of speech and writing, but when it comes to eliquette and table manners, how many there are who fall short of the rules laid out by the standard on such mattert."-Bir-
