The Revolt of Islam.

Turkey, which had been allowed for some time to retire into grateful obscurity, is once more in the limelight. The Grand Duke is out in earnest for Erzincan, to which the war has been made ready by the capture of Balurt. At the same time the Arab revolt along the Red Sea appears to be gaining in strength and importance. The causes underlying it are probably of much greater moment than the mere surface indications would seem to show. The Arabs have never really recognized either the temporal or spiritual suzerainty of the Sultan, and the upheaval in Europe may in the end profoundly affect the whole Mohammedan world in Asia. Only the greater events elsewhere have largely distracted the attention of the Christian world from the significance of the Arab uprising and the importance of their capture of Mecca, the holy city and seat of Islam. If now Taif falls, Medina, the second city, may be next. What will be the effect upon the two hundred million Mussulmen of the world, of whom more than a quarter are under British rule and protection?

English comment upon the situation is cautious and guarded. Great as are the spiritual forces involved, it is recognized that it is the military factors which must tell for the present. The Arabs are a notoriously volatile race, incapable of cohesion and combined and organized efforts, and their warlike operations must not be given an exaggerated importance. But the situation is pregnant with possibilities. Continued successes and the failure of Turkish arms in the north may band together more and more effectively the forces of the Grand Chief and bring recruits flocking to his standard. The renaissance of Arab may be one of the most potent and welcome results of the war. Ever since Turkey joined her lot to Germany's, the Arabs have realized the falsity of her position. As the Telegraph says, "To be at once the head of the faithful and a puppet of Berlin is in the eyes of the Arabs a degrading position. The Mohammedans have begun to discover that Mohammed V. is so entirely in the hands of the Germans that he is deprived of all initiative, and has to carry out the commands of his Tonic taskmasters." In the gradual decay of Turkish power and influence which is based very widely upon the intense religious feeling of the Mohammedans, German ambitions are being fanned. The Kaiser's dream of Eastern Empire is fast dissolving. The activities of the Arabs may have an immediate military effect upon the campaign in Mesopotamia, but if they grow to national dimensions they will produce a political one of vast and abiding importance.

THE INVASION OF HUNGARY.

There is persistent talk in Paris and Petrograd of the possibility of Austria's surrender and her conclusion of a separate peace with the Allies. A moment's consideration of the practical details and the necessary arrangement of terms will serve to discount the idea.

A Magnificent Display of Disciplined Courage

HIGH PRAISE FROM THE GENERAL.

LONDON.

To His Excellency the Governor, St. John's:

Have returned from France, where we met our men and addressed the Battalion. Our officers and men are cheerful and anxious to secure full strength at earliest possible time. The gallantry of our Regiment in action on 1st July deserved, as it has received from General Hunter-Weston, Commanding our Army Corps, and all others, the highest possible praise. Nothing has occurred since the commencement of the war more conspicuously brilliant. The General Staff and many others assure you and all Newfoundland of their heartfelt sympathy. We desire to unite in their expression, particularly with the families of those who fell. General Hunter-Weston's official report of the engagement of which he handed us a copy begins:

"Among such grand Battalions it is difficult to allocate greater praise to one rather than to another; but, as this is the first occasion on which troops from our Oldest Colony, Newfoundland, have taken part in a big battle, it is good to be able to say that they proved themselves worthy of the highest traditions of the British race, and that no Battalion among all these hands of heroes did better than they. They attacked regardless of loss, moving forward in extended order—wave behind wave—undamaged by the heavy fire to which they were subjected. It was a magnificent exhibition of disciplined courage."

The wounded are doing well.

R. K. BISHOP, J. A. CLIFT.

His Excellency the Governor observes that General Hunter-Weston commanded our Army Corps in Gallipoli and in France. He was a Royal Engineer and won a great name in South Africa and elsewhere, for his brilliant initiative and capable leading.

Message From the Premier.

July 22, 1916.

I am just in receipt of a message, sent from London on the 21st instant by the Prime Minister, as follows:—

"I much regret the death of poor young Brown who died here yesterday. He will be buried to-day at Wandsworth. Everything possible was done for him. I am leaving immediately for the front in France to visit the Newfoundland soldiers and will report fully on my return. I regret exceedingly Mr. Jackson's sudden death. The Colony has lost a patriotic son and St. John's a citizen whose example and work were and will be of great value."

Here they are! Just what you've been looking for. Baseball and Romance combined, the most interesting stories ever written.

The author managed a league team a number of years ago and is thoroughly familiar with the doings of baseball players on and off the field. Father and son will find equal delight in reading these magnificent stories.

"Any Boy with Plenty of Grit," "Baseball at its Finest," and the "Girl in the Case"—these are the elements which compose the most successful juvenile fiction ever written. You don't have to be a fan to enjoy these books; all you need to be is really human and alive, with plenty of red blood.
