A Veteran of the Klondike Gold Fields Tells of the Winter Trip to the Outside.

Frost Bites and Dangers of the Northern Waterways - A Remarkable Tale.

Those who know the meaning of travel from personal experience in crossing the continent on the soft cushions of a Pullman sleeper can hardly comprehend the definition of the term that a Klondike pilgrim would give more especially if that pilgrim had chosen the winter season for his exit from the land of yellow dust and ice.

"Seven-twenty next morning saw us on the road again, Hoochicoo creek, sixteen miles being made, and fine accommodation being found at the end of the day's traveling. Everything here was of the best, and at reasonable prices. Horse meat was on the bill of fare for supper and breakfast, this being considered a luxury by the traveling party, but compared with the fare we had been accustomed to on the way out. At this point I bought a dog, for which I paid $175.

"Mr. Lanning, being a 230-pound man, played out, and we only made six miles that day, the weather growing warmer and the glass showing about 20 below zero. Camping for the night we cooked our own meat of oatmeal mush, fried bacon and apples. The glass showing about 20 below zero. dogs and outfit, on one sleigh. I set camp for the night, with the thermometer below, one ear, and my nose and fingers yellow.

After breakfast we had a change. It was a fine pole to lie on, the traveler furnishing his own blankets; $2.50 was also the charge for a meal, supper consisting of bolted beans, fried bacon and apples, with tea-only this, and nothing else. For breakfast we had a change. It was tea, fried bacon and bolted beans, with slapsacks for dessert. The slapsacks were carried for a shoe pack.

"The statement made in the evening paper that they were credibly informed that 'seven boys attending public schools of Victoria, not one of whom is yet sixteen years of age, have become the victims of one of those superabundant bagnios' was taken up at the board of school trustees yesterday afternoon. At the opening of the meeting Chairman Hayward said that at a meeting of a committee of the board held last Saturday afternoon Trustee Marchant said that he had heard such a condition, as stated in the evening paper, existed in the schools. This was before the paper containing the statement was issued. On Monday the board met and Trustee Marchant and the trustees agreed that a commission be appointed to investigate the matter.

"Trustee Belyea also expressed his regret that he had not been able to do more for the boys or at least whether they belonged to the schools. He replied that he had been told the names of the boys, but could not remember the names and had not been able to do more for the boys or at least whether they belonged to the schools. "The dogs played out at three in the afternoon, and I found myself at home and well cared for by Mr. Green and his mother, of Seattle, who could not do too much for me. With the care received on the trip I was able to take up the tramp again at half past ten on the following morning, proceeding eight miles on the journey, when one dog gave out and I was obliged to take the lead in the making of my own way. THE MAGIC OF A NAME.

"Dorothy Morton and Mr. Hubert Wilke present 'The Beggar Student'." Comic opera is unquestionably the most popular of all forms of theatrical entertainment with Victorians, and even when the quality of the production is disappointing, patrons and critics are indulgent, because an opera is welcome. So with 'The Beggar Student,' which Miss Dorothy Morton, Mr. Hubert Wilke and their associates of the Dorothy Morton opera company presented last evening. It was not a high-grade production, by any means; it was neither sung nor acted with the skill of the former triumphs with 'The Fencing Master' and 'The Geisha.' It was unappreciated by the audience, and the verdict on the showman's or rather the writer's and dramatic ability of the co-stars, for the support was crude to a degree.

"The following telegram was, says the N. C. Daily News, received recently by the friends in Chungking from their friends in Victoria: 'I am sorry to hear that you have been back on his promise and again held the flag of rebellion. The French have undertaken to supply the arms and munitions for the Siberian railway by sea with Dunstirk.'

LESSONS OF THE FIRE.

How Yesterday Morning's Blaze May Be of Advantage to Victoria.

Losses Little Changed by Revision - Very Inadequate Insurance.

Yesterday morning's fire, by which the Heathorn block on Government street was converted into a blackened shell in the course of two short hours, has been fruitful in the production both of criticism and of suggestions looking to the improvement of the fighting efficiency of Chief Desay's department. If the more valuable of the latter are acted upon there will be gain instead of loss to the city at large from the present experience - for preparedness in the assurance of safety, and no city can afford to be prepared for but one fire at a time.

"The fire did not demonstrate alone the necessity of a sufficient number of fire-fighting companies to be available, but it also showed that the fire-fighting companies are not well equipped. It showed conclusively that Victoria must depend entirely on the steam engines when called upon by a fire. It also showed that the fire-fighting companies are not well equipped.
