METHODIST PAPER ON THE MOVIES

Thinks Greater Care Should be Exercised in Censuring
Moving Pictures.

That the movies are here to stay there can be no doubt. That they can be made a great source of pleasure and edification is questioned by none. That many of the pictures, at present being shown, are of a demoralizing and vicious character is much to be regretted. During the past week, in this community, the chief features have been the display of numerous practically nude girls, with little more apparel than the heathen loin-cloth or the traditional fig-leaf, the same performing evolutions called "rhythmic motions," to show to best, or worst effect the unbecoming female body. At matinee sessions as many as two or three hundred young children were found in attendance witnessing such exposures with all the attendant follies.

Besides these, recent pictures "for men only," and "for women only," shown ostensibly to warn the public against sexual evils, have been nothing more nor less than a puritan pandering to the morbid salacious propensities of portions of the public for the sake of gain.

Many of the pictures seem to have as their chief feature the display of illicit intrigues between the sexes. When the last moving-picture censor was appointed in Nova Scotia the promise was made that greater care would be taken in giving approval to pictures than had previously prevailed. We fail to see that there has been any improvement. On the contrary, there is evidence of greater laxity, and pictures of the most vicious tendency are common.

Is it not about time the Government waked up to the seriousness of this matter?

Now, also, that greater privileges have been given to women than ever before, should they not assume corresponding responsibilities, and as electors demand from the Government a better control, a purging of this whole movie business?

There are many temperance, patriotic, philanthropic, and moral reform associations, amongst the better thinking women, that might combine to lessen this evil, especially as it is largely their sex that is exploited in these sensational and vicious presentations. They might also be appealed to engage in such a crusade as being especially the guides and guardians of the younger children whose plastic natures are being exposed to such ruinous revelations.

Is there not also some responsibility resting upon the Mayor and councillors in this matter, especially, as in some cases the halls of civic buildings are rented to these picture show vendors? They put houses and whole families in quarantine if one member of them should happen to have the measles, or some other ailment, and pay money to prevent the breaking of the quarantine. If it were a matter of choice, far better let a whole family of small-pox patients have the liberty of the streets, than to allow some of these demoralizing pictures to pollute the eyes and hearts of hundreds of the children of the town.

It is to be hoped that an indignant public will not permit this evil to continue.—Wesleyan.

WORK PROGRESSING.
It is stated that in about two months, the excavation in connection with the drydock of the Courtenay Bay works will have been completed. The soil from the dredger is being used to re-claim about 25 acres of land, upon which shops in connection with the drydock will be erected.

The intestinal antiseptic, Adler-ika, acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and brings out matter which might start an appendicitis infection. EXCELLENT for gas on the stomach and chronic constipation. Adler-ika brings out matter which you never thought was in your system. A. McG. McDonald, Druggist.

HIS WILDEST RIDE

An old locomotive engineer who is rated as a good mixer by his brother workmen tells how he got excited at a piano recital when a passenger named Moose Jaw, in a communication published in a recent issue of the Saskatchewan Daily Star. Brother Ernest W. Haworth, member of Lodge 33 has sent us a clipping of the communication, which is as follows:

"I was loitering around the streets one night," said A. Lemming, one of the old and best known engineers, at one time out of Moose Jaw, "and as I had nothing to do I dropped into a concert and heard a sleek-looking Frenchman play a piano in a way that made me feel all over in spots. As soon as he sat down on the stool I knew by the way he handled himself that he understood the machine he was running. He tapped the keys away up one end, as if they were gapes and he wanted to see if he had water enough. Then he looked up as if he wanted to know how much steam he was carrying, and the next moment he pulled open the throttle and sailed into the main line as if he was half an hour late. You could hear thunder over culverts and bridges and getting faster and faster, until the fellow rocked, about in his seat like a cradle. Somehow I thought it was the old 935 pulling a passenger train and getting out of the way of a general managers special. He worked the keys on the middle division like lightning, and then he flew along the north end of the line until the driver went around like buzz saw and I got excited. About the time I was fixing to tell him to cut her off a little he kicked the jumpers under the machine wide open, pulled the throttle 'way back in the tender, and how he did it! I couldn't stand it any longer—a yell to him but he was pointing his left side and if he wasn't careful he'd drop his ash pan. But he didn't hear. No one heard me. Everything was flying and whizzing. Telegraph poles, the side of the track looked like a row of corn stalks, and trees appeared to be a mud bank, and all the exhaust of the old machine sounded like the hum of a tumble bee. I tried to yell out, but my tongue wouldn't move. He went around the curves like a bullet, slipped an eccentric, blew out his soft plug, went down grades fifty feet to the mile, and didn't touch the air once. He went the meeting point at a mile and a half a minute and called for more fog. My hair stood up straight. Because I knew the game was up. Sure enough, dead ahead of us was the head light of a "Special." In a dash I saw the cars shivered into atoms, people smashed and mangled and bleeding and gasping for water. I heard another crash as the French professor struck the deep keys away down on the lower end of the Sutherland division, and then I came to my senses. There he was at a dead standstill, with the door of the fire-box of the machine open, wiping perspiration off his face with a chunk of waste, and bowing to the people before him. 'If I live to be a thousand years old I'll never forget the ride that Frenchman gave me on a piano."

DEFAUDING THE KING.
In the French days in America a very profitable business was carried on by most of the rulers sent out from France in defrauding the King. Little information had the monarch of the real conditions prevailing in the land that had been found across the sea for the officers he sent to represent him there saw that only the information they had arranged reached the royal ears. So they were in a position to reap the rich harvest they saw everywhere and do so to their own personal advantage. Trade arrangements were sold by the rulers of New France so that a big share of the profits went to the governor or the intendant. Anything that was of unusual value was taken from the settlers at a price far below its value and in turn sold to the king at a profiteering rate. The prices often doubled and trebled in the various transactions made, with a fine share of the cash coming to the governor. They controlled all sales to the King of France and they made sad inroads upon the royal treasury. For a time Bigot, the intendant, used the name of Claverie in his trading. He started a warehouse near his Quebec home that was known locally as "The Cheat," because of his commercial practices. It was a money maker for the governor but a source of trouble to the monarch. In spite of all his plans, however, Bigot was far from satisfied, for there was another Frenchman in the community, Cadet by name, who was the greatest plunderer ever suffered. He succeeded in buying from the French stores goods for which he paid 400,000 francs; later he sold them to His Majesty for one million, four hundred thousand francs. This action roused the better animosity of Bigot, who desired the first place.
