"Aul' Doctor Kidd."

Of the present generation of Aberdonians, there are perhaps few who have not heard tell of the doughty deeds and tender sympathies of this worthy divine of a good old school; with what ready hand he used to throttle the social evils of his day; how well he knew human nature—its good and its ill; and how he had a happy knack of putting "th' saddle on th' right horse." Who has not, by the chimney corner, listened to the oft-repeated stories of the doctor's countless acts of thoughtful charity, his broad geniality, or his Christian zeal? Who is not familiar with the old folks' quotations from his eloquent addresses and prophetic utterances; quotations always prefaced with head-shakings and the words, "As aul' Doctor Kidd used to say!" and finished off with "Na; there's nae preachin' like it noo-days!" But, to leave poetic reminiscences, it would seem as though some of the old people do not believe the sturdy doctor to be dead, and have resolved not to enter a church till he return to his "chapel of ease." A short time since a hard working young minister was doing his customary visiting in the vicinity of Windy Wynd, and happened to drop in upon a lonely old lady, whom nobody appeared to mind very much. In the course of conversation with her, he asked:

"Who is your minister, my good woman?"

"Dr. Kidd, sir!" was the proud reply, and she looked up expecting to hear her doctor praised.

The visitor calmly replied—

"Dr. Kidd has been dead these thirty years or more!"

One can imagine the look of supreme disgust that crept over the old lady's features as she muttered—

"Deid! Dr. Kidd deid! Na, na, dinna ye tell me that, sir! Na, na!"
