

The Critic.

Vol. 1.

TORONTO, ONT., SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1883.

No. 6

"Love is kind . . . seeketh not its own . . . endureth all things . . . never falls out."*
—1 Cor. xiii., 4, 5, 7, 8.

* Faith and hope are (by implication) treated, in this passage, as grain, which will "fall out" of the sheath when ripe—when lapsed in the realization of their object—love, on the contrary, "never falls out," but accompanies such as are addressed in this epistle, in their eternal state.