

years set forth in the relevant section of the statute. It is also important to note that the relevant statute may contain a provision that limits the amount of time that may be taken by the state to file a complaint.

The complaint information

If the prosecutor has decided to file a criminal charge, he or she will file a complaint. This document is a formal accusation of a crime. It is filed with the court and serves as the basis for the trial.

The complaint must contain certain information, including the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.

The complaint must also state the name of the defendant, the date and place of birth, the address, and other identifying information.

The complaint must also state the nature of the offense, the date it was committed, and the facts that support the charge.

The complaint must also state the name of the prosecutor, the date it was filed, and the name of the court where it was filed.