The Times of Flowers.
Dear Miss Grey—I noticed in the column a short time ago where you were inquiring about the poppy beds planted by several of the pagettes. Well, Miss Grey, I planted a bed about six feet by five feet. My mother, not knowing, planted a row of cucumbers straight through the centre of my poppy bed. Well, there were poppies and cucumbers all coming up together.
I noticed a short time ago a letter written by a 15-year-old "Lower in Trouble." I am 15 years of age and I would not think of going with a fellow until 17 or 18 years old. The girls nowadays think they have to run around with fellows when they are 14. But I intend to take my mother's advice and not be so silly.
"Fair Play." I received your letter short time ago. You haven't written on the page for a long time.
We take a farm paper and a contest is given in it quite often for the boys and girls. I wrote a story and took second prize. I always was a good writer but never thought I would take a prize.
Now is the time of flowers. There is nothing I like better than to see lots of flowers blooming around the house. I have hardly any flowers this year, only pansies, poppies, balsams and cosmos. I obtained the cosmos seed from Aunt Nannie. I wonder where dear old Aunt Nannie has gone to. She wrote such nice letters. I just wish you could see my row of cosmos. Miss Grey, they are so pretty. I would send you a bouquet if I could. Well, I will close for this time, hoping "K Pistol" soon recovers and that she receives many nice postcards. P.S.—What do you think of the drawing enclosed. Miss Grey?
A—I think we should congratulate this boy for her success in prize-winning. First thing we know she'll be writing a book and expecting us to buy one! Re the poppy-cucumber bed, you failed to tell us which prevailed. Perhaps practical mother objected to having the cucumbers uprooted eh? I'm glad you're such a dear, sensible girl. Puss; it always pays to listen to good advice from another. Re the drawing, I think you do very nicely. Why, I could almost smell the poppies. Keep right on and then you'll be able to illustrate the books you write, and won't that be a saving?

Fleas in House.
Dear Miss Grey.—We had some children visiting at our place and they played a lot with the neighbor's dog which had fleas. We did not notice the fleas until they had got all through our house.
Now, Miss Grey, your paper would be worth its weight in gold to us if you or any of the readers could tell us what to do to get rid of the fleas.
Hoping that someone knows, I will sign myself, WORRIED.

Ans.—Paint all crevices with oil of penny-royal or tincture of larkspur, and where possible fill up with yellow or carbolic soap. Bedding should be thoroughly washed, and mattresses and pillows disinfected with formaldehyde. If the person is also annoyed, sponge with carbolic water, or water containing one-quarter ounce camphor and one-half ounce tincture of myrrh to a quart of water.

For a Bride-To-Be.

Dear Miss Grey.—Would you or some of the readers help me out? Wish to crochet an edge on some scalloped. Would like the pattern (not the directions), as I simply cannot make anything out of them. The patterns I have are not pretty enough or narrow enough. want it very narrow. Will someone please help me?
ROSE MARIE.
This is for a bride-to-be. Will someone please help me make a motherless girl happy?
Ans.—Referred to readers. If response is received I have Rose Marie's envelope here.

Brantford Nursing Sister Is a Guest of Paderewski of Poland

Sister of London Woman Had Wonderful Trip To Polish Capital.

The following is a letter in part from Nursing Sister Amelia Heath of Brantford, sister of Mrs. Nelson Emigh of 576 Maitland street, this city, telling of her journey from Paris to Warsaw, Poland, care American Food Commission.

Hotel Bristol, Warsaw, Poland, July 22.

Dear sister.—Have just arrived in Warsaw, after a most wonderful and interesting journey. Mr. and Mrs. Paderewski brought us here on their special train, and we certainly did travel "de luxe." They were charming to us, too. We came through France, Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland. I shall never forget the majestic beauty of the Tyrolean Alps.

Arrive on Polish Soil.
At the last station before we reached Poland proper, Madame Paderewski asked us if we would not like to put our feet on Polish soil, and when we got off the train, shook hands with us all and welcomed us to Poland. She told us this place used to belong to Poland, and that it soon would be restored. When we reached the present boundary, the train quietly slowed down and stopped. There was a quiet, serious-looking crowd awaiting—soldiers, civilians and ragged, barefooted, hatless women and children. It was pouring rain, and not one of them had an umbrella. The rain was dripping from the hair and ragged clothing of the women and children. Not a word was spoken until Paderewski appeared, and when he stepped off the train, the mayor of the town, an intelligent-looking but poorly dressed man, came forward and addressed him. Then Paderewski spoke.

Reduced to Tears.
We could not understand what he said except "Bohemia," but we were so affected by the tone of his voice, the eager manner in which they listened, and the whole aspect of the scene that we all shed tears. It is pathetic, this forlorn little nation, in its determined struggle for existence.

After Paderewski had finished speaking, the crowd cheered and sang the national hymn. We arrived in Warsaw the next day, and there was a big crowd at the station to greet the president, as they call him, though he is really the prime minister. Soldiers were lined up, and a band was playing the mournful style of music which they use to see.

Escorted to Palace.
Madame Paderewski's arms were full of flowers which little girls had given her. They had expected to stay at the hotel, but the palace had been prepared for them, and they were taken there. The palace has not been occupied by the Poles for over 125 years, when their last king lived there. The Russians have occupied it since. The evening of the day we arrived, Madame Paderewski sent two Y. W. C. A. (Polish-American) girls to our hotel to see if we were comfortable. They asked us to tea the next day. Madame Paderewski was there, some officers and a Polish doctor from Pittsburgh, who is now in Haller's army.

Yesterday we were invited to tea at the palace. There was quite a number of people there, and Madame took us through the palace afterward. It is beautiful, and compares well with Versailles.

No Work Yet.
We have not yet been assigned to any work. There are 10 more doctors and 500 enlisted men coming from Paris, whom we expected to work, clearing up the villages and taking care of the sick. It will be hard and not very agreeable, but it is expected.

that it will be finished by the middle of November. People in America do not seem to realize how Poland has suffered through the war, in some villages there being nothing to eat but grass, and the people are dying daily of disease and starvation. I have never seen so many people ragged and barefooted as I have seen since coming here. There are a great many deformed, too. In spite of all their suffering, they are determined to be an independent nation with their much-loved Paderewski at their head.

POLLY AND HER PALS.—Looks Like It'll Be a Wonder If They Don't See Stars.

Nujol For Constipation

Sickness-prevention

received the stockingfoot pattern almost two years ago and always keep a supply cut on hand to give my friends. Could any of the pagettes send in a good recipe for canning pumpkin? And oblige.
ANS.—That's quite an idea of yours, keeping a supply of the patterns on hand and has no doubt saved C. G. mailing many a one. Hope some one will supply a pumpkin canning recipe. Here is one for dried pumpkin which some prefer to the canned method. When dried, the pumpkin should be carefully packed away in air tight and vermiculite proof paper bags.
Cut the pumpkin in dice, as for cooking. Boil as usual, then press through a colander. Spread on buttered platters—granite will do—half or three-quarters of an inch thick. Leave it where it will dry readily, and keep turning. When it is dry, crisp and a golden brown, it is ready to pack away. One half cupful will make a pie. Soak well in milk or water for twenty minutes before using. Squash for winter use can be treated in exactly the same way.
