Cold Storage for Your Furs

It's Necessary for Their Health and Good Looks
THE LIFE OF YOUR FURS depends on the care they get during the hot weather. For though you may keep them safely from moths in your cedar chests or moth bags, a very real danger lies in the fact that the warmth of the summer months may dry the skins. And when the natural oil is lost the pelts begin to decay and the fur loses its lustre and falls out. This, of course, can be avoided by placing your coat, muff, stole and various fur pieces in cold storage. In our Cold Dry Air Vaults, which are kept at a uniform Arctic temperature all the summer, they may be kept in their natural climate. Here they are properly cared for, each garment being thoroughly beaten and combed before being hung on its own little hanger, free from dust and moths, safe from fire and burglary. The charge is very moderate, being only 2 per cent. of a fair valuation.
