Belyea's Performance Is a Remarkable One

Defeats Fast Company in Record Time on Charles River—McCavour and Cambell Also Win Honors in July 4 Meet at Boston.

Boston, July 4—The New England Amateur single sculls championship passed out of local possession for the first time in years this morning when Hilton A. Belyea of St. John (N. B.), defeated a fast field of scullers over the 1 1-2 mile course with a turn on the Charles river in the remarkable time of 9 minutes 36 seconds in the feature race of the programme of the annual Independence Day regatta. So far as previous records show his time is the fastest that has ever been made on the river and is two seconds better than the clocking made some years ago by Frank Greer on Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, in the national amateur regatta.

Showed Good Judgment.

Belyea won easily by six good boat lengths ahead of Carey Faulkner of the Riverside Boat Club, Cambridge, the title-holder. The former national champion, Tom Rooney of the New York Athletic Club, was third, one-half a boat length astern of Faulkner's shell, while Jeremiah Shea, of the St. Alphonsus Athletic Association, one time New England champion, was a poor fourth. Belyea was third in making the turn at the half way mark in the race, but took the lead one-half mile from the finish and crossed the line pulled up. The senior sculls was easily the best race of the seven, all being conducted in praiseworthy fashion, by the New England Amateur Rowing Association. Weather and water conditions were just about ideal. A dead calm ruled during every event.

Belyea's performance was remarkable for one of his years. He is thirty-nine years of age, but has the strength and endurance of a sculler of racing years. His watermanship local men think was not wonderful, but he had the power behind his stroke and the run between that produced speed. It was remarkable how he made such fast time, because, according to local experts, he used a pair of giant oars built for "a sweepster rather than a sculler." They were seven-inch blades that weighed all of six pounds each. Belyea used good judgment in the race.

Shoots into Lead.

He permitted Faulkner to set the pace to the turn, trailing Rooney, who chased after the Cambridge sculler. Faulkner's turn was better than Rooneys, but Belyea negotiated the twist even smoother than Faulkner. Going into the last half mile the Canadian pushed up his stroke a pitch or two and his frail craft shot into the lead with a burst of speed that sent him away from Faulkner and Rooney. His drive to the finish gave him the trophy by a wide margin.

As Manuel Gomez of the Riverside Boat Club, winner of the novice and junior single sculls, was too much used up by his double victory to compete for intermediate honors that event went to Charles Campbell of St. John (N.B.) uncontested.

In the novice race Grenville McCavour of St. John (N.B.), a boy of fifteen years, was second to Gomez and fourth in the junior single sculls. Russell Codman of Union (B.C.) was second and Charles Campbell of St. John, was third in the junior event.

Withdraws From League.

St. Peter's intermediate baseball team has withdrawn from the South End League as a result of the street car strike, which they claim makes it impossible to assemble their players in time to reach the grounds. The All Stars will replace them and will be given until Saturday to organize.

Imperial Oil Team Wins.

The Imperial Oil team won from the Beavers by a score of 14 to 13 in the South End League last evening. The game was interesting despite the high scoring and was enjoyed by a large number of fans.

St. Peter's Defeat Pirates.

St. Peter's defeated the Pirates in the City League fixture played on the East End grounds last evening by a score of 10 to 2. Owing to the position of the diamond the sun shines directly in the face of the batters, catcher and umpire and has a tendency to spoil the game. The pitchers are forced to slow down for fear of injuring the batters. The players were loud in their protests last evening and are demanding that the diamond be shifted. The box score and summary follows:

Nashwaak Indians, 7; Simms, 4.

The Nashwaak Indians defeated the Simms team, 7 to 4, last evening in the Industrial League. The first two innings were scoreless and there was but one hit allowed by each pitcher. Simms' first three men up in the next session were retired and, when the Indians came to bat, Corvec started a rally, which continued until, with the help of a bad error or two, it neted them six runs. Simms' big inning was the sixth. Allen got to first on an error by O'Toole, the Indian's shortstop, and Pirie and Hogan hit safely. All three crossed the plate, Allen on Hogan's hit, Pirie and Hogan on fielder's choices. oCrvec had eleven strikeouts and Ross, for Simms, had five. Last evening's game was one of the best of the season.

Portlands, 7; St. George's, 6.

The St. George's were given a serious setback in their championship aspirations last evening on the Queen square diamond when the Portland Redmen took their measure by a 7 to 6 score, in the opening game of the second series in the West End League. The game was not exciting for the spectators, as it developed into a pitching duel between Logan and Maxwell, with the Portland hurler having the better of the argument. Portlands ran up four runs by the time the second inning was over, and the best comeback St. George's could make was one lone run in the third. In the fourth, Portlands scored three more, due mainly to poor fielding by St. George's. The St. George's made a last stand in the sixth, when the first two men walked, the next man flied out, and then Thompson came through with a single to centre, scoring one. L. Maxwell then drove the ball to centre, and two more St. George men raced across the pan. Maxwell attempted to stretch his drive into a double but was caught. The next man fanned, and the third grounded out. In the seventh, St. George's scored twice, but were unable to tie the game, and it was called at 9 o'clock with Portlands one ahead.

St. Peter's 12, Wolves 7.

SOME FAMOUS OLD TIME FIGHTERS

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

Of James Figg, the first boxing champion, who died as long ago as 1734, Captain John Godfrey wrote in a fine frenzy:—

"There was a majesty shone in his countenance and blazed in all his actions beyond all I ever saw."

Figg was a proper man with the small sword, the back sword and the cudgel, as well as with his fists. He "established an amphitheatre or academy of arms" in Oxford Road, Marylebone Fields, and there he taught his accomplishments to "a large number of gentlemen." The Tatler sang his praises. When he held at exhibition the doors were open three hours before the first contest was put on. In Dodsley's Collection of Poems may be found some verses by the poetaster Byrom to the "sole monarch acknowledged of Marylebone plains," which Thackeray turned into prose for "The Virginians." Thomas Moore thought that the respect shown for John Jackson, known as "Gentleman Jackson," was "highly comical."

Gentleman Jackson.

When Jackson, who became a champion, fought Fewterel of Birmingham at Smitham Bottom, June 9, 1788, the Prince of Wales was a spectator. A hundred and thirty-one years later another Prince of Wales witnessed the "knockout" of Beckett by the Frenchman who is to perform in Jersey City today. It is the same England. "Gentleman Jackson" had a boxing academy, and his pupils included the nobility and gentry. In his retirement he was landlord of the Sun and Punchbowl, Holborn. He sleeps in Brompton cemetery under a "colossal monument" paid for by public subscriptions, says the New York Times. "Gentleman Jackson" was once victor over Daniel Mendoza in the presence of the Duke of Hamilton and Lord Delavel and "a vast concurse of spectators." The Lords of England have always dearly loved a boxer. Mendoza retired to the Admiral Nelson tavern.

Gully the Great.

He was the author of a small duodecimo, "The Art of Boxing" (1789), and he left a book of memoirs. Dying in Horseshoe Alley, Petticoat Lane, he left a widow and eleven children. But greater in many ways was the immortal Gully. In his first battle, with Henry Pearce, the "Game Chicken," he might have seen at the ringside the Duke of Clarence, who was afterward William IV. Gully succumbed after sixty-four rounds of stubborn fighting with the bare hands under the old savage London ring rules. He early relinquished fame in the P. R. for laurels in other fields. As a turfman he won the Derby three times. It was said that Lord Rosebery had three ambitions—to be premier and to win the Derby and to marry the richest heiress in England—all realized. Gully was never premier, but he did represent Pontefract in parliament. Riches beyond the dreams of avarice came to him as an owner of collieries. He had married two wives and had twenty-four children. Great was Gully!

Boxer Turns Artist.

An English pugilist hardly less remarkable was Jem Ward, who, like many of his tribe, lived to a great old age. His most famous battle was with Tom Cannon, for £500 a side, on July 1919, 1825, "in very hot weather, in the presence of 12,000 persons, including an unusual number of the upper classes—wearing high hats, of course, as was the mode. Jem Ward became champion of England, and for a while kept the Sir John Falstaff tavern in London. Suddenly he abandoned his "pub," moved to Liverpool and, strange to say, turned artist in oils, producing "numerous landscapes and other pieces of unquestionable merit." His pictures at exhibitions were much praised. So proud were his townsmen of his accomplishment that they gave him a service of plate at a dinner of Liverpool representative men. But the ex-champion was talented muscian as well as a painter, performing delightfully on the violin, flute and piano. One of his daughters became a pupil of Sir Julian Benedict, and distinguished herself as a pianiste.

Cribb's Great Fight.

Tom Cribb should not be omitted from any list of deserving pugilists, for not only was he champion of England for ten years, retiring for want of challengers, but he had as good a name for probity and sportsmanship as the idolized Sayers, and was honored with the title of champion emeritus. Twenty thousand people saw Cribb beat the doughty American black, Tom Molineux, at Thistleton Gap, Leicestershire, in the presence of 20,000 people, after which memorable affair Captain Barclay raised a purse of £10,000 for Cribb. A review of pedestaled English boxers of past times, when brute courage was more essential than "science," is necessary to an understanding of the rapture for championship contests that excites the Anglo-Saxon, and in part the Latin world today. It is an emotion that has never been allowed to die out. Of late years in the United States it has been artificially fanned by commercialism, and it is sometimes a question whether high prices and division of the spoils will not in the end kill the sport.
