KEEP PLANTING.

Don't forget about your successional plantings as the season advances. Every war gardener should make a point of having a continuous supply of fresh vegetables for the table. There should be several successive plantings, one or two weeks apart, of string beans, lettuce, radishes, spinach, sweet corn, peas, beets, and carrots.

Onions to be used green may be followed by late tomato plants in the same row. A few of the onions may be removed to make way for the tomatoes. Radishes mature early and as they are harvested the space they occupy may Successional plantings must necessarily be left largely to the good judgment of the individual gardener. Weather conditions and the success he meets with in his various crops will largely decide the question for him. The main point to remember is that full use must be made of the ground at his disposal.
