CHILDREN

Are always liable to sudden and severe colds, to croup, sore throat, lung fever, etc. Remedies, to be effective, must be administered without delay. Nothing is better adapted for such emergencies than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It soothes the inflamed membrane, promotes expectoration, relieves coughing, and induces sleep. The prompt use of this medicine has saved innumerable lives, both of young and old.

"One of my children had croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it

Strangling.

It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicine it had taken, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having a part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and in a short time it was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved its life."—C. J. Wooldridge, Wortham, Texas.

MR. ELDER'S VIEWS ON RECIPROCITY.

The Sun this morning publishes two extracts from an editorial which appeared in the Telegraph in 1874, at the time when the late George Brown was seeking to negotiate a reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States. The article is interesting as embodying the views of the Telegraph at that time on the question of reciprocity and for the purposes of placing these extracts from it before the readers of the GAZETTE we republish them. They are as follows:—

The treaty was abrogated, and those who had been instrumental in accomplishing this end calmly set themselves to view the utter ruin and extinction of Canada. If the Canadian people had been dumb and unreasoning animals, trained to draw in a yoke, Canada might possibly have been ruined by the repeal of the treaty. But as they were men of enterprise and intelligence they sought other markets for their produce, they began to manufacture for themselves, and consequently agricultural produce, which the high duties of the United States kept out of that country, there were others such as lumber, which could not be kept out, however high the duties, because the United States could not do without them. In point of fact the export of Canadian lumber to the United States has more than doubled since the repeal of the treaty. Instead of a period of depression Canada has enjoyed a period of unexampled progress and prosperity; her foreign trade has doubled, her manufactures increased four fold, and her business although so large, has been on so satisfactory a basis that a great commercial panic which spread ruin through the United States, and which has left every industry in stagnation ever since, had but a slight effect in Canada, instead of bringing disaster to every door as it would inevitably have done had the old state of affairs which existed during the reciprocity treaty continued.

We have always favored a fair and equitable reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada as a mutually advantageous and just arrangement dictated alike by natural laws and by reason and common sense. The only objections that have been made to such an arrangment have been by certain monopolists in the United States who feared Canadian competition and desired to keep up the price of certain articles of general use. But their interests, it is obvious, are directly at variance with the se of the great body of the people who desire cheap food and other articles of prime necessity and Canada has no right to pay for the privilege of supplying such articles to the people of the United States. Our experience with the United States in the matter of treaties has not been of such a favorable character as to make us particularly desirous to enter into any new arrangements with them, for we have generally found they managed to retain all the advantage on their side.

This article embodied Mr. Elder's views but it was not written by Mr. Elder's own hand. Mr. Elder unfortunately was incapable of expressing himself in the plain direct and straightforward manner of the article quoted; he could not have put the case of Canada as against the United States, in respect to reciprocity in twelve short sentences, although he might have done it in as many articles. Neither would he have administered the backhanded slap at our neighbors over the line which is contained in the last sentence and which was partly due to the narrow interpretation of the Washington treaty by the government of the United States in levying a duty on lobster and fish cans containing fish that had a right to enter the United States free, under that treaty. The writer of the article quoted was a member of the Telegraph staff of that day, who has not since changed his opinion with regard to reciprocity. But it was fully assented to by Mr. Elder and was written after consultation with him. For many years prior to his death Mr. Elder was so impatient of the question of reciprocity that he objected to having it discussed in the columns of the Telegraph at all. He considered that Canada, in her efforts to obtain a reciprocity treaty, had gone as far as it was right to go and after the failure of the Brown negotiations he looked upon the whole subject as a dead issue not to be revived unless the government of the United States entirely changed its policy with regard to it. Mr. Elder was not a man of high spirit, but he was unwilling, in 1874, and in the years that followed it, to see Canada humiliated by sending commissioners to Washington to beg reciprocity from our enemies there, and he never would have sanctioned the policy of the present Liberal leaders who are willing to lick the boots of the people of the United States to obtain a new treaty, no matter how often the are kicked aside and spat upon. If Mr. Elder could return to the scene of his former labors he would look with amazement on the management of his paper which since his death has preached almost every doctrine that he condemned, which has become an organ of secession and rebellion, has decried the prosperity of Canada and exulted when misfortune overtook this country; which at one time has enacted the role of Uriah Heep, at another of Pecksniff and again that of the unrepentant Scrooge. And if he had looked at the Telegraph's ledger and read the results of this change of policy, as written there, his surprise would have changed to indignation and anger.

A PROPHET OF EVIL.

New Brunswick is not the only country which contains prophets of evil, for an alleged scientific person named Mason, who is connected with the National Museum at Washington, has just came to the front with an elaborate theory to prove that this continent will at some future day relapse into barbarism and be inhabited only by savages. The chief reasons which this professor gives for taking such a gloomy view of this continent, are, that the wild animals of America are inferior to those of the old world, and that the wheat fields of one state after another have become exhausted until Dakota has now become the great wheat region. In proof of the first proposition he states that the elephant of Europe is represented by the tapir in America, the camel by the llama, and the lion and the tiger by animals that are mere cats by comparison. In saying this however Mr. Mason, is not original for the same idea was put forward in Robertson's History of America which was published in 1777. The absurdity of the theory was proved by a single example, that of the bears, the grizzly bear of North America being incomparably superior in strength and ferocity to any bear of the old world. Nor is there anything to show that the European man has deteriorated in the two or three centuries he has lived in America. The descendants of the men of the Mayflower of whom our honored governor is one are, as good specimens of manhood mentally and physically as any European importations, nor are our own Acadians who have had no new blood added to them from Europe for one hundred and eighty years and who have been settled here since the year 1635 in any way inferior to the peasantry of France.

If the wheat fields of New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and even of Illinois have been abandoned it is because the farmers of these states found it more profitable to grow other kinds of food rather than compete with the virgin soil of the west, then just opened by the plough and brought by means of railways within easy reach of the markets. The same causes have led to the abandonment of wheat growing in New Brunswick to a large extent, but this is a matter that will right itself. This continent is able to sustain just as dense a population as the present population of Europe and with the same care and economy of the future do so. It is fortunate that Mr. Mason, the author of this new theory of decay is in a museum, for it will save any one the trouble of putting him there, and he must feel quite at home among the other fossils. Mason would be a splendid acquisition to the Grits, who are now in search of men with new and original views on the subject of blue ruin to stump Canada at the next elec-

NOTE AND COMMENT.

The failure of Senator Aldrich to pass his closure resolutions which were brought up in the U. S. Senate for the purpose of shutting off debate on the force bill and passing that measures shows that some members of the republican majority have become alarmed at the revolutionary methods of Messrs Aldrich and Hoar. This result also probably insures the defeat of the force bill for the apportionment bills are now on and will have to be passed before either Closure or the force bill is again taken up.

The Moncton Transcript is very unkind to Mr. Daniel L. Hanington and does not give him the slightest credit for his forgiving disposition as shown by his stumping the county of Westmorland for Messrs. Powell and Stevens. It says of him:—

Mr. Hanington in Moncton as in Shediac met a cold reception. As he rose to speak about a hundred people left. If there is a man politically dead in this county it is Mr. D. L. Hanington. He killed the coalition ticket, and now Stevens and Powell are discovering him to be an old man of the sea.

Those who believe that the Globe is subsidized by the government of the United States to defend American interests, to attack Canada, and to discredit St. John, will have their suspicions confirmed by reading its defence of Blaine's conduct in the Behring Sea matter, which appears in the Globe of last evening. The Globe is a Blaine organ, and is ready to say yea, yea to everything Blaine chooses to affirm, especially if it is against Canada. The Globe has actually the impudence to censure those Canadian papers which undertake to defend the cause of Canada against Mr. Blaine.

Mr. C. H. Lugrin contributes a fine poem to the Toronto Week under the title of "A Milicete Legend." It is in the same hexameter verse as Longfellow's Evangeline and its subject is Glooscap. We are glad to see the Glooscap legends being dealt with by a native author for that contemtable literary thief Charles Leland, who obtained access to the Rev. Silas Rand's papers has appropriated the whole of them and after stealing them had the impudence to publish them in a book under the title "Algonquin Legends of New England." Is not Mr. Lugrin mistaken, however, in calling them Milicete Legends? Are they not really Micmac Legends? The Micmacs occupied the mouth of the St. John River when this country was first discovered and for many years afterwards. The note which Mr. Lugrin prefaces to his poem is as follows:—

The legend of Glooscap and the Beaver, as told by the Milicete Indians, relates to the River St. John in New Brunswick. The Beaver's dam was the rock through which the river now finds its way to the sea. There is reason to believe that this was not the original mouth of the river. The Beaver's house was what is now called Kennebecasis Island, and the Indians claim that evidence of its having been built by a gigantic race of beavers can be seen today. Rocks are pointed out in some parts of the river valley, which are alleged to have been used as missiles in the conflict between Glooscap and the Beaver. One version of the legend represents the former as having thrown them, another the latter; but in all the versions, differing as they do on minor points, the story is substantially the same. A period of happiness is followed by one of misery, at the end of which a deliverer appears, his coming being followed by great changes in the face of the country, and especially by opening of a new outlet for the river, whereby its lacustrine character was changed to what it now is. What bearing the existence of this legend has upon the antiquity of the Indian race, I will not pretend to determine.

The St. David's Church Matter.

To the Editor of the GAZETTE.

SIR:—"Justice," with characteristic inconsistency asks T. R. S. for his name, and witholds his own, but he is old enough to know that the public takes no interest in names, for "what's in a name?" Old Mortality never struck a harder blow, as he thought, when he wrote that "one honest woman was worth ninety-nine such men," as those who criticise his idiosyncrasies. But is he not barking up the wrong tree when he hits his fellow member such a clip from his chisel; an elder too, instead of praying with, and for his weaker brother hits him so sharp: and calls him hard names: Alas: they will have to bring this ordained elder, and the fellow member before the session; when they become brother members. We fear though, the elder will not give this honest woman, who is worth ninety-nine men, a vote in his church. And so, when I seek to join the church, I'll try to find one, whose leaders are not such narrow, cranky, pernickety little Scotchmen; who when they have charge of a fine building, which was chiefly put up by others, many of whom are at rest, or are in other lands; will not let it go to ruin, because they object to modern methods of raising money to preserve it. As I understood the motion by Mr. Willett, and as the able managers and wise men in Triniiy, St. John, Centenary and Queen Square churches did and especially when the fathers have done their share, a little should be left for the children to do. I'll choose a church where its officers will not try to prevent their fellow members voting, because they are women, for I cannot forget if I would, that my dear old grannie, my mother, wife, sisters are all of them, women, and all of them better christians than even "Justice", even if an elder, or myself, as I shall be, when I join this perfect church where all vote. Nor would I join a church, that would disfranchise Martha Washington, Florence Nightingale, Frances E. Willard Frances Ridley Havergal, Sarah B. Judson, Catharine Beecher, Rachel McMillan, Alice Tilley, Margaret deSoyres, the members of the W. C. T. U. merely, because they are unfortunately, born women!

The Virgin Mother; blessed among women, has no higher glory, than that Her Sinless Son, came to enfranchise woman lift her to the same level as man, to be the one wife of one husband, which Christianity has effected. And when I see such women at the bedsides of the sick in sad homes, and in our hospitals, while their husbands, these lords of creation, as they assume to be, are whooping in curling rinks, or cackling with brother members it may be, when I see these small specimens of humanity dressed in the little brief authority which the eldership may confer, try to cast down woman, by denying her, man's rights, disfranchise her, they will always be opposed by me, for my gratitude to the weaker sex whom I think the stronger sex, can never fail.

Working Women who Marry.

Miss Mabel Goddard, who has been studying the relations between industry and matrimony for the past ten years, states in emphatic form that the wo women workers. It may be gratitude that moves the hearts of men, and undoubtedly admiration and affection have something to do with the result, but whatever the main cause the fact remains that quiet, docile, intelligent and competent nurses find themselves at the head of homes and families in a remarkable short time after graduation. Like the Vassar girls, these daughters of mercy marry well, which is more than can be said of the captivating little typewriter, who ranks second. Her training is at best superficial. She is not a judge of men, and while her affection is sincere enough she lives to repent, to detach herself, to return to her corner and machine in the down town office again, and often to make a second choice. Considering its size, matrimony makes fewer depletions in the army of school marms than in any other organization of female labor. Seamstresses become consumptives and end their days in the charity hospitals; cooks and domestics go to the asylum or die on the Island, but the poor, unfortunate, nerve-rasped pedagogue lives to look like a piece of old leather, to lose her hair, teeth, temper and faith, and to go to the Great Unknown fighting school to and beyond the end of of reason.

A Dinner Lost and Won.

An enormously large hawk poised in mid-air a few days ago over Jacob Heather's fine flock of Shanghi chickens at Durham, Bucks County. Selecting one of the finest, a seven-pound rooster, the hawk fell upon it, and majestically bore it skyward. The contemplated meal was never to be eaten, however, for Walter Hammortin happened to be gunning under the path of the hawk's flight, and succeeded in bringing the latter to earth. The rooster was uninjured, while the pirate had his head blown off.

Purify The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is hereditted and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also contaminate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing exclusively more conclusive than the proven power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and builds up the whole system. Thousands testify to the efficacy of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.
