MR. BLAIR RESIGNS.

Mr. Blair and his three colleagues in York have resigned their seats in the face of the election petition pending against them and will now again appeal to their constituents in that county. This action is somewhat unexpected, but it has a number of advantages. It will save Judge Palmer the trouble of trying the election petition and the Supreme Court the task of deciding a number of knotty points which have been raised by the counsel for the sitting members. It will bring on the election at a time most convenient to the farmers of York and will decide once for all whether Mr. Blair is to be premier of New Brunswick for the next three years or not. If Mr. Blair is to be defeated it is best that he should be defeated now in order that he may have an opportunity of considering his position. Should Mr. Blair fail of re-election, a result which we do not anticipate, he will have time to make arrangements for entering Dominion politics as a candidate for York. Mr. Blair is now in his own county addressing the electors and no doubt the county of York is deeply stirred at the prospect of a contested election. The solid yeomanry of York like an election, because it gives them an opportunity of obtaining more political enlightenment to say nothing of the money which is generally circulating on such occasions. But the people of St. John, who view this contest from afar, need not feel deeply stirred just at present. This is exhibition week and if we must get excited over the York election let the excitement be postponed until our distinguished visitors have taken their departure and our industrial show is over.

ST. JOHN AS A WINTER PORT.

The Moncton Transcript, while praising the people of this city for their clean streets and their pushing, progressive and orderly character, thinks we have "a bee in the bonnet" with regard to the winter port question. Referring to the statement of this paper that the winter port must be St. John because the distance from Montreal to Halifax by the I. C. R. is 850 miles, while from St. John to Montreal by the C. P. R. it is only 481 miles, the Transcript says:—

But what about the distance by water from St. John to England as against from Halifax or Terminal City to England. The object is not merely to get to deep water, but to that deep water which offers the shortest combined land and water distance available for the largest area of tributary country. St. John falls short in this respect. Another objection to St. John as a port of shipment for through freight is that in the event of the Conservatives remaining in power and preventing the obtaining of reciprocity, that inasmuch as the freight to reach St. John by a short route must travel over the C. P. R. and through American territory that the success of the route altogether depends upon the American government not abolishing the through bonding privileges as a retaliatory measure which abolition is threatened. It is candidly admitted that if the Liberals obtain power and unrestricted reciprocity is obtained that the force of the argument is destroyed but in the meantime it is a strong one!

As compared with Halifax the distance from England to Montreal is less by water and land via St. John then by way of the Nova Scotia capital. The following figures show this clearly enough:—

LIVERPOOL TO MONTREAL.

	By Sea	By Rail	Total.
Via Halifax	2,468	850	3,318
" St. John	2,577	481	3,158

Here we have a difference in favor of St. John of 160 miles, so that St. John fulfils the Transcript's demand for the shortest combined land and water distance and as compared with Halifax does not fall short in this respect. The Transcript ought to know that the cost of moving freight by rail is three times as great as by water and that practically there is no difference between the rates of freight to Halifax and St. John. The 369 miles of extra land carriage by rail from Montreal to Halifax is equal to 1000 miles voyage by sea in respect to cost. Even if the bonding privilege should be abolished St. John would still have the advantage in point of distance.

THE LESSONS OF THE EXHIBITION.

Though nobody is taken in by the exhibition, it continues to be taken in by thousands. It was thought last week that after a few days it would have been visited by every one for whom it had any attractions but the arrivals in the city during the past twenty four hours have been quite as numerous as they have been any day since the fair opened. On the streets and in the buildings last evening the mouths of many of the unsophisticated were twisted into the shape of an interrogation point: Where do all these people come from? To say nothing of the thousands from Ontario, Quebec and the United States, representatives are present from Aldouane, N. B., and Amaguadus Pond, N. S., Baccaro and Benacadie, N. S., and Bartibog, N. B., Canobie, N. B., and Cap la Ronde, N. S., Doctor's cove, N. S., and Dungiven, N. B., and so on through all the alphabet. The man from Jemseg is also present, as hearty and as full of anecdote as of old and with his friends from Nereps, Otnabog and Pisarinco, allows nothing to escape his attention within the buildings or without. Halifax and Herring Cove are represented by a large delegation, but it is not a happy one. The absence of the fog to which they are so thoroughly accustomed depresses their spirits and brings on a vertigo which renders locomotion in many cases extremely difficult. We wish they could have brought along with them a little of their favorite element for their personal use but science has not yet rendered such an achievement possible. Seriously, we rejoice in our glorious autumn weather and in the presence of our visitors, many of whom, if not all, will take home a host of pleasant recollections of the days spent here. To many a farmer's wife and many a farmer's daughter the exposition has afforded a novel as well as a pleasant and instructive holiday. Some of them will go home with enlarged ideas of their capabilities and duties. We hope the lessons of the exhibition will not be allowed by them to pass unheeded. "The farmer feeds the world," but without the co-operation of his better self, the fare of the world would be hardly tolerable. Good wives make good farmers, and good farmers reap good incomes and lead good and happy lives. Therefore we are glad that so many of our agricultural visitors are accompanied by their wives and daughters, who will carry home quite as much useful information gathered at the show as their husbands and fathers. They learn here that in all housewifely duties good work brings good results, and is really easier than slovenly work that yields but scanty fruit. They will remember that to make their acres laugh they must be fed as they feed their children and that their ribs must be frequently tickled in order to produce a hearty shout in the form of fruits or vegetables. These good wives and daughters will remember many things which their husbands and fathers, whose perceptive faculties are less acute, will pass unnoticed, and hence our farmers who have brought their wives and daughters to the exhibition may thank their stars that they had them to bring, and that they did not come to the show alone.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Common Council has done a very proper thing in resolving to present Sir John A Macdonald with an address. Sir John occupies a wholly exceptionable position as a statesman and in welcoming him to St. John they are simply doing honor to a man of whom all Canadians are proud without regard to the political views which they may hold.

Sir John A. Macdonald arrived in Halifax this morning and will deliver an address in that city to-day. The speech which the venerable chieftain of the Conservative party will deliver in St. John will no doubt be a more important one than the Halifax affair. St. John is a loyal city and the "haul down the British flag" men have to take a back seat here.

Hon. Mr. Foster visited the exhibition yesterday and greatly admired St. John's big show. Mr Foster will be one of the principal speakers at the big meeting on Friday night, and his words will be listened to with close attention. In point of ability and eloquence Mr. Foster takes a high rank among the Conservative leaders, and the future may have much greater things in store for him than any he has yet attained.

The origin of New Brunswick names of places is an interesting study. Many years since there resided at a point some 12 miles above the Grand Falls, Leonard R. Combes. He was a militia colonel and a man well known among the people. Some divisious having to be made of the county in which he resided, into parishes, the colonel was appointed one of the commissioners to name them. He with his fellows came to Fredericton and appearing before the Governor, Sir Edward Head, the council handed in their list of names. On this list there appeared as the name of a parish, that of Saint somebody, he did not remember to have heard what the saint's name was. Taking up the paper and looking at it Sir Edward quietly laid it down, took up his pen and with one dash obliterated the saint's name, and over it wrote "Leonards," saying to the commissioners, "How will that do?" The parish is now known on the records of the province as "Saint Leonards."

Death of the Highland Poetess.

As we briefly announced last week, Mrs. Mary Mackellar, the well-known Gaelic poetess is dead. She had been in bad health for some time and died on the 7th inst in Edinburgh. She was born about 55 years ago in the Lochaber district, the home of the Camerons. At an early age she gave indications of possessing poetic genius, as well as a rare power of literary expression in prose. Her poetry soon attracted attention, while as a narrator of Highland tales and legends few could rival her. For many years her name has been a household word in the Highlands. The Camerons gave her remains a public funeral—one of a purely Celtic character. On the 10th inst., after a short servic conducted by Rev. A. B. Cameron at the deceased's house in Edinburgh, the coffin was raised on the shoulders of a half a dozen Cameron Highlanders, and in that fashion covered by a Cameron tartan plaid was born along the streets to the Waverely station, whence the train was taken for Oban There the funeral party rested over night, and proceeded by boat next day to Fort-William and then to Kilmallie, Mrs. Mackellar's native village. At Edinburgh about fifty mourners were in procession, headed by three pipers of the Camerons Highlanders playing "Lochaber No more," "The Flowers of the Forest," and "Scots Wha Hae,' Lochiel, the chief, and a number of friends and clansmen, joined the funeral at Fort-William and assisted at the conclusion of the obsequies. The Queen also sent a message of sympathy to the relatives of the deceased.

Mrs. Mackellar married (at a very early age) a shipmaster, and with him sailed the seas for many a day, enduring "perils oft." On settling down in a cottage at Fort-William she began her literary career in earnest, her first efforts being a series of papers on her seafaring life. These attracted great attention. Thereafter she removed to Edinburgh, where she lived more or less until her death. On the death of Mr. Duncan Macdonald she was appointed bard of the Gaelic Society of Inverness. In 1880 she published her volume of Gaelic and English poems. A few years ago she translated into Gaelic the Queen's book, "Leaves from the Journal of a Life in the Highlands."

Becoming feather boas are made of dark green coq feathers, and must be two yards in length. Feather necklets come in colors matching costumes, and are to be fastened with clasps or tied with ribbons. To be on the topmost wave of fashion one must wear with a black cloth street dress a crownless toque entirely of black ostrich tips. The vest may be of tan color or chamois, and the gloves either of tan or black.

Mrs. Meachim—Come heah, C'lindy. Heah's yo' fren', Mistah Danks, goin' down t' de arm'ry t' drill. Clarinda—I doan' care nuffin' 'bout day trash now. I done asked him t' gub me some buttons fo' earrings d' last time he wuz heah, an' he pulled 'm off'n his s'pendahs.—Judge.

THE EXHIBITION.

THE RUSH OF VISITORS CONTINUES AND THE CITY IS FULL OF PEOPLE.

Nearly 40,000 Admission Tickets Have Been Sold—The Attendance Yesterday 8,800—Prospects Good for a Crowd of Sightseers All Week—Sir John Macdonald and the Governor General Will See the Great Show.

Eight thousand eight hundred people paid admissions to the exhibition yesterday. A great many who went in the afternoon took lunch on the grounds and stopped to see the fireworks display in the evening. This display was excellently arranged and was one of the best ever seen in St. John. While the fireworks were being set off most of the crowd left the buildings to view the display from outside. The next display of fireworks will be on Friday evening.

Every train coming into the city is still crowded with people and the attendance at the exhibition for the remaining days will no doubt be large enough to bring the receipts up to an amount that will make the directors happy. The financial success of the show is already secured.

Among the visitors this week some very distinguished personages will be counted. Hon. G. E. Foster spent some hours there yesterday. Sir Henry Tyler president of the G. T. R. and Mr. Wainwright, assistant manager of the same road, were also present.

At the directors' meeting last night it was unanimously decided to invite the mayor and common council to accompany his excellency the governor general to the exhibition tomorrow.

On Friday Sir John A. Macdonald, Hon. G. E. Foster and Hon. Mr. Costigan will formally visit the building.

D. MAGEE'S SONS

have a magnificent exhibit of furs in a large sized booth in one of the upper galleries. These manufacturers are well known throughout the Dominion, and their goods rank among the very first class. Their exhibit comprises almost everything they make, in furs, and is not only complete, but very fine. They are showing raised shoulder capes, with Queen Anne collar, in beaver, black martin and bear, the most popular style; ruffs of all kinds, sealskin sacques; fur-lined coats and wraps, caps, muffs and gloves. They make a specialty of fine manufactured goods, and manufacture to order if desirable. No visitor to the exhibition should neglect to inspect thoroughly the many styles of furs in Magee's booth. They are handsome and will doubtless excite admiration and no little envy.

SOUP SAMPLES.

At the same stand with the Spa water samples of soup made from Kerr's evaporated vegetables are being dispensed free. The soups are of a very fine flavor and are prepared from vegetables in such a manner that housekeepers who have tried them find a great saving in time and money in their use. The evaporated vegetables are sold in 15 cent packages. The same company handles them that runs the Spa water business and nearly all the leading establishments in the city have Kerr's soup vegetables in stock. Mr. Stewart of the Kentville Star is in charge.

THE ORNAMENTAL PLASTER PIECES.

shown by Mr. Frank Melliday at the chimney in the southeast corner of the main floor are much admired and show that Mr. Melliday can execute very fine work in the ornamental plastering and mason line.

THE WALL PAPER AND WINDOW BLINDS

exhibit of F. E. Holman on the main floor of the new building is very tastefully arranged and gives evidence that Mr. Holman is to the front in his business with all the latest and most beautiful designs.

Along the northern gallery of the new building are some very interesting exhibits. One of these is made by W. B. McVey

THE YOUNG UNION STREET DRUGGIST.

He shows medicines and drugs and the substances of which they are made, such as nux vomica seeds from which strychnine is obtained, poppy capsules, from which opium is made, etc. Then he has a finely arranged display of the medicines he makes himself including elixirs, etc., and Dr. Baxter's Chalybeate, a great tonic.

Just across the aisle is the exhibit of the

which is very handsome, showing all the kinds of oil they sell arranged in the various descriptions of packages; also paraffine wax in different shades and worked up into miniature monuments, slabs etc.

H. W. NORTHRUP'S

show of breadmakers yeast, stove polish of several kinds and other goods which he sells on the South wharf looks very well.

James Paterson and John Sealy make

just in the next spaces. The fish are put up in various styles of packages suitable for shipment to the west or anywhere else and in shape for retail dealers to handle.

MESSRS. J. & A. M'MILLAN have on exhibition a very handsome display of their printing and binding. Their establishment has a high reputation for fine work in the printer's art, and the samples which are shown are the visiting, at home, and invitation cards; menu cards of various hotels in St John and Halifax; and reception cards which have been printed by them within the past year or two. In binding, this firm show work which has been done by them for Mr. A. A. Stockton, ledgers for banks, telegram and counter books, and numerous volumes. These are all tasteful and durable, and are very creditable to the binders. On another table Messrs. McMillan have display of Carter's inks, mucilages and glues, the whole exhibit being in charge of Mr. John Golding, jr., who is at pains to have everything in proper order.

JOHN WHITE.

Nothing attracts more attention than handsome parlor furniture and chamber suites, and the space occupied by Mr. John White's exhibit has therefore been properly allotted. Several mirrors line the lower end of this booth, while a comfortable carpet covers the floor. The parlor suite in terra cotta velvet has elicited no end of admiration, and the elegant sideboard and bureau also shown serve only to combine with this and set it off. The exhibit from the warerooms of this well known firm is not only attractive, but it shows just what class of goods Mr. White manufactures.

The fine exhibit of

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

made in the north end of the main building by Mr. A. T. Bustin, is much admired. These instruments, which are of
