Representatives of Manufacturers' Association Given a Great Reception in Old Country.

Writing to the Montreal Star from London, England, a correspondent says:

"I had a chat this week with a member of the executive of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association now visiting England, and it would be difficult to exaggerate the sense of appreciation which the deputation feel of all the kindness and hospitalities they have received. 'We knew we should be well treated,' said this leading Montreal manufacturer, but not one of us dreamt that the English people would put us through in such royal style. We have been killed with kindness, and, of course, it has been a pretty big education for many of us. We come from Canadian centres, most of which have, so to speak, only begun their industrial career. Many of us have read ever since we were children about the United States at the expense of poor old England. It was pretty much a case of America first, England nowhere. can tell you that, after going through some of the leading mills and factories in the Midlands and Yorkshire, we are quite prepared to put a heavy discount on this Yankee bragging. I never saw mills as well equipped as most of those we went through, and I know that other judge, were simply astounded at the re-finement of manufacture to which many of the English industries have now been carried. When any man talks to us now about poor old England as a back number in the manufacturing world, we can tell him he simply does not know what he is talking about. Let him go through, some of the Yorkshire mills (and much the same, of course would apply to the mills of Lanchashire, Galashiels, Sheffield and other great manufacturing mendous career in front of her as a manufacturing country. "Those of use who have done little public speaking in Canada have, by the many opportunities of the tour for practice, become quite expert talkers on our feet. A manufacturer having shown us round his mills would generally say, 'perhaps you would like to make a few remarks to the mill girls or the male operators,' and we had to do it; and I must say that nothing could exceed the kind reception given to what we had to whenever you talk about the British Empire, about the younger nations growing up over the seas, the men who will work of the British race, you stir up these British working people to the very height of enthusiasm. They are all hungering for just the sympathy and co-operation which we believe Canada and the other colonies will soon be able and cager to give. It is a fine ideal this of much older. "Of course we had a great time in Birmingham, the home of Chamberlainism. Mr. Chamberlain seemed just as delighted to see us as we were to see and shake hands with him. I do not mind confessing that when I came up to Mr. Chamberlain, I gave him a hand grip such as he does not often get and said, 'God bless you and your work, sir. You are about the only statesman the Empire's got on this side of the Atlantic.' smiled in a quiet, sage way, and I felt I had said enough

"One interesting outcome of the Canadian manufacturers' visit is the proposed establishment of a British Manufacturers ers' Association upon somewhat similar lines so that of the Canadian body. British manufacturers have in the past been a mass of singularly isolated items; each manufacturer has looked with more or less jealousy upon his fellow-manufac turers, and there being, of course, no tariff affairs to bring them together in discussion and co-operative action, they have for the most part left each other clone to the disadvantage of all. The way in which the Canadian manufacturers have stood together and formulated their united policy and programme, quite content that their president should be their spokesman, has impressed not a few of the manufacturers of this country, who realize how much greater their influence would be in legislative and other affairs if they possessed the same kind of solidarity. The movement for the establishment of a British Manufacturers' Association is, of course, still in the infant stage, but it will be surprising if it does not soon bear fruit." STEAMER STOPPED.
