Though sorrow long has worn our hearts
While watching by his dying bed;
We cherished still a hope for life,
But cruel death has come instead. That father's heart was warm in truth, T'was joy to us with purest ray; He was so kind to us in youth, Oh! why could he not with us stay?

Such was the father we loved so well;
These were the hopes that fate denie
We loved, but, ah! we could not tell
