The brightest page in the history of any war is perhaps, that which recorde the thoughtfulness of the officer and the faithfulness of their men—qualities which, when conjoined, make a regiment an almost irresistible force. In 'The Spory of the Rough Riders,' Edward Marshall tells how, when Captain McClintock was woundhow, when Captain McClintock was wounded, one of his troopers came and lay down

·You'd better get out of this.' said Me-Clintock. 'It's too hot,'

'Don's worry, captain,' the man replied, "I'm between you and the firing-line."

McClintock touched him as he was by this exhibtion of the man's devotion, still wanted him to get away: He urged him to leave him. The man refused. Finally McClintock said:

'l'm your captain and I order you to go You are you are doing no good to any one but me. This is no place for a well man. I order you.

Then the man had to tell.

'I aint no well man,' he slowly admitted.

'I'm shot.' "Where P' asked McClintock.

'Oh, it's only a scratch !' 'Oh, it's only a scratch!'

They lay there in silence for a long time.

The firing began to come from the left.

The soldier worked his painful way around until he was again between McClintock and the line of fire.

McClintock was too weak from loss of blood even to speak. Then a hospi'al man came and lifted McClintock to carry him back.

'Take him, too,' McClintock managed to articulate.

'No use,' said the hospital man. 'He's dead.

Sometimes advertisements are funny enough to deserve gratuitous circulation. The following are from England, but they will be appreciated by readers in this

Two menageries recently arrived in a border town, one of which was under the management of Signor—, and the other under that of his wife, travelling respectively on their own account. Here they decided to unite their forces, and the fact was intimated on the bill thus:

'Owing to the arrival of my wife, my collection of forecast wild animals is considerably augment.

This was the work of a foreigner. It is thought to have been fairly outdone by a native who hung out the following from a travelling exhibition of waxwork:

'The public is invited to see Her Most Gracious Majosty, Queen Victoria in waxwork, as large as life, and other curiosities.'

A remark made by a six-year-old boy on a certain occasion was the natural result of confusion in his small mind, but it caused musement to the bystanders.

The house in which he had first seen the light of day had been torn down to make room for a wider street, and the little boy, holding fast to his father's hand, viewed the ruins with griet and amaziment.

'Why, papa!' he cried, sorrowfully.

'Why, papa, I wasn't born anywhere now, was I?'

And Running Yet.

'If you won't stand up and fight,' yelled the American soldier" throw down your arms and surrender!

'You make me tired!' panted the Filinia.

The Bullfrogs.

If you live out in the suburbs.
You will always know when spring
Has assumed control of weather,
By the way the bullings sing
There is something weirdly mournful
In the music from the bog.
The low drumming and shrul whistling
Of the versadie to lang frog!

It the nightingale's wan spirit 'Haunts the bullfrog, as they say, There's no wooder that the freggle Pipes a sorrow-naden lay! But to any one thats homesick, Or is feeling rather clunt, He will what he whole awamp chorus Had at once been stricken dumb!

There are irogs that are quiet harm!
Such as railroad irogs, and those whose hind legs we see before as.
Fried and crippy, minus toes;
But you often hear' or think so.
And it makes your cold blood cre
when the legs are served, still with
A most lamentable "peep!"

When you're coming from the clubroot Or the dance, quite late at night. These amphibious young creakers. In a joily take delight, And along the lonery stretches Ere you reach the well-known sate. They wil make you see ganat pictures Or will try at any rate 1

There's the cricket's chrip of autumn,
And the locu's monolude,
There's the 'wh opping" of the owlet
In the forest's solvinde!
There's the hum of the morquito
And the whistle of the qual,
But surbanites hear oftenest
The green bullitreg's world wail!

Thus we ask her to our houses, Confident her presence there Is our guests no fear accuses, From our friends will cause no stare.

Thus we meet her when we visit,
Thus in drawing-room and street
Think we know her, but we miss it—
Her disguise is quite complete.

I know not where tomorrow's path may wend, Nor what the feature holds, but this I know, Whicherer way my feet are forced to go, t shall be given courage to the end.
