Secured a Moose

There is certainly some class to Jimmie Gaulton, the Standard's bank boy. Jim is a member of the St. Stephen's Scout Cadets and carried his gun with him when it comes to sighting a rifle. He took a few days' vacation in the woods last week and only been scouting through the woods for one day when he managed to meet a moose weighing over 900 pounds. With steady aim, Jim plunked one bullet through the right eye of Mr. Moose, and not being satisfied, he placed another bullet in the side of the animal and killed it. Jim got the big fellow in the woods back of Clarendon and brought the carcass to the city. He now wears a smile that will never wear off.

EFFECTS OF CONFLICT ON CHURCH WORK

Rev. H. A. Cody deals with question in able manner — Churches must stand together.

The effects of the war upon the churches is the subject of an interesting sermon delivered in St. James' church last evening by Rev. H. A. Cody. Answering the question which people were asking with varying feelings, Mr. Cody said the effects of the war upon the churches, would be of a two-fold nature. There would be ill effects and good effects.

Among the first of the evil effects would be the discouragement felt by many that after all the centuries of Christian teaching such a terrible war could break out among the nations of Christendom. Then there would be the diverting of money from ordinary channels; this would mean less to be devoted to church and philanthropic and missionary purposes. The war would also have an effect upon the attitude of the hearer to Christianity. Missionaries would find it hard to explain to the heathen the meaning of the stupendous war among Christians. Another effect would be the stirring up of the baser passions, the hatred, recklessness, and brutality, which always marked war.

Offsetting the ill effects, the speaker said the war would necessarily produce some good effects upon the church. First there would be the opportunity of the church to use its influence in stilling party strife and passions in the nation. Another effect would be to make the churches step aside from theological controversies and give more attention to the work of solving the real problems that confront mankind. It would tend to accentuate the common purposes of the churches, and make them stand shoulder to shoulder in the work of social amelioration, and face with greater determination and energy the evils of the world. The war would show the people that the strength of a nation is not in its armaments, but in the justice of its cause and the spirit of its people. "Righteousness exalteth a nation."
This war is a call to the churches to unite more closely in the work of carrying out their higher missions in the world. It would bring the people to their knees in prayer and supplication. It would encourage a spirit of self-sacrifice, and the placing of the larger interests of the nations above self interests.
On the whole the speaker thought, while the war was a calamity, its good effects upon the church would be greater than the ill effects.

TOOK PICTURES OF FORT HOWE

Man arrested claims he is in employ of Dominion Government — Must produce credentials.

The military authorities yesterday took into custody another suspected spy. This man was found on Fort Howe taking pictures and making drawings. He was arrested and taken to the armory, where it was said he became quite indignant and claimed that he was in the employ of the Geological Department of the Dominion Government. The seriousness of the situation was explained to him, and rather than spend the night in the cells at the armory he gave up his apparatus and promised to produce his credentials this morning.

Military men pointed out last night that they were compelled to take all precautions against spying, and any one acting suspiciously was liable to arrest. Military officers are sworn to carry out instructions in this regard, and they are compelled to arrest any suspected of spying. So far in St. John the authorities have been lenient in comparison to the action of the authorities in other places. It was also said that if people before attempting to take pictures would get permission from the military authorities they would save themselves and the military officers a great amount of inconvenience.

THE POLICE GET MIXED UP WITH THE CONSPIRATORS IN THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Some startling scenes in the eleventh chapter at the Unique today.

Many and varied indeed are the conclusions that are being arrived at by the many who are following the Million Dollar Mystery. Each succeeding chapter, however, has a tendency to deepen the plot, and the guesser is then left more in the dark than ever. The eleventh chapter is no exception to this rule. "In the Path of the Past Express" which will be the edition to be shown today and tomorrow at the Unique, not only makes one wonder all the more just how the story is going to end, but also claims a number of really wonderful scenes. For instance the wreck of the fast express is something not seen every day, even in a motion picture, and it is claimed that the train was actually wrecked in order to add all the realism possible. Then the rescue of Norton from the rails by Miss La Badie is a daring accomplishment, while the fight between the conspirators and the police, with the sensational ride of the police on a hand car, will surely go down in the history of the film drama as being something decidedly worth while.

Other features on the same program represent an excellent array of subjects.
Don't miss "In the Path of the Past Express," and keep in mind that ten thousand dollar prize offer.

TO DEVELOP INDUSTRY IN CAPE BRETON

Nova Scotia capitalists plan on opening Barytes Mines — Can supply all Canada.

"The barytes mines in Cape Breton will soon be able to supply Canada with all the barytes needed, and produce a surplus for export," said George Corbett of Annapolis Royal, who came to the city on Saturday after a visit to mining properties in Cape Breton, in which he and other Nova Scotia capitalists, are interested. "Germany has supplied Canada with practically all the barytes which it has been using in the past, and we expect to have the mine ready soon to capture the business which has been done by the Germans. We had an offer from New York capitalists to take all the barytes we could produce if they were permitted to take the raw material to the States, and work it up there suitable for commercial purposes. But it is our intention to develop a new industry in Cape Breton, and doing the necessary manufacturing where it may be of some benefit to our own people. We will not raise the price of barytes now, or in the future, except in so far as the rate of wages we have to pay compels us to do so."

Barytes is used in the manufacture of paints and chemicals, and Mr. Corbett says they have a sufficient supply to last for generations. In company with S. M. Brookfield of Halifax, and others, Mr. Corbett visited Lake Umbagog in Cape Breton where the mines are located and while there they were treated to an old fashioned snow storm.

PIG WITNESS IN OWN BEHALF

Two weeks old porker victim of thief — Taken to Court as evidence of John Campbell's misdoing.

A poor little pig, only two weeks old, with only a succession of squeals to allow any person to know that he was in the county, was a principal in a serious, yet rather funny case on Saturday. Little piggie is owned by Thomas Grames of the Red Head Road and up till Friday had been enjoying itself merrily about a pen in the rear of its owner's property, when it was taken up and carried away by a thief.

The loss was made known to County Policeman Saunders, who was not long in chasing John Campbell under arrest, charging him with the theft. At the time of the arrest Campbell was at the residence of James Cameron. The case came before Magistrate Allan in the court at Brookville Saturday evening. The officer was obliged to carry the pig to court and the grunter was placed before His Honor as the evidence of stolen property. Campbell was found guilty and fined the sum of five dollars and in default of payment to serve one month in jail. The porker was returned to the rightful owner and the court adjourned.

HOUSE AND BARN BURNED

Alex. Clark's property at Silver Falls visited by flames last evening—Loss about $4,000.

Shortly after nine o'clock last night fire was discovered in the residence of Alex Clark which was situated on the road at Silver Falls, a short distance west of Blind Man's Lake. The fire got quite a start before it was discovered and when it was seen that it could not be extinguished, Mr. Clark with some assistance managed to remove nearly all of his furniture and clothing, and to the farming implements from a barn which was close by.

The fire spread quickly through the residence and it was soon a mass of flames. The fire then caught the barn and it was not long before both buildings were a heap of ashes. A large quantity of hay which was in the barn was also destroyed. It could not be learned last night just how the fire started, or if there was any insurance on the house or barn. The loss will be in the vicinity of $4,000.

DEALS WITH EUROPEAN CONFLICT

Rev. J. J. McCaskill points to fact that Allied cause is just and right.

Rev. J. J. McCaskill, in St. Matthew's Presbyterian church, yesterday morning, preached an interesting sermon on matters connected with the present European conflict. His text was "For there is a greater with us than with him," II Chron., 32:8. His remarks were as follows:

"A century ago, when England was in the midst of a conflict to free Europe from military tyranny—a conflict of similar nature to the one for which she is now arming her legions—when the days were dark and the issue in the balance, the Rev. Robert Thompson, minister in the Chapel of Ease at Arbroath, preached before the Arbroath volunteers from the text: 'Be strong and courageous, be not afraid or dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him; for there is a greater with us than with him.' With him is the arm of flesh; but with us is the Lord our God to help us, and to fight our battles."

"These words form the substance of an address with which Hezekiah endeavored to encourage his people when his kingdom was invaded by a powerful enemy, whose success would inevitably destroy all that they held most dear. They have peculiar application to the present situation. The flag of England displayed on the Alps, the Rhine or the Rhine, is not there for a selfish purpose. If later the scene is changed to the Thames, the Tay, the Tweed or the Shannon—as it may well be—we will still fight with all confidence in the justice of our cause. This confidence is the only permanent incentive to true courage. The conviction that our cause is righteous gives us reason to conclude that God is with us. But confidence in the justice of our cause and in the presence of the God of battles is not alone sufficient to win victories. Be strong and courageous," is the first injunction of the text. The ancient Hebrew prince made every preparation that prudence could suggest. He was as diligent in using the means which were in his power, as if divine aid had not been promised. He stands a noble example for those who are now directing the forces of the country. He prepared as though numbers alone counted, and at the same time he depended on God as though the best human exertions had been vain.

"Much of the strength of our armies comes from the consciousness that they are fighting the battle of justice and of human liberty. England's great past in the fight for civil liberty is today the clearly felt assurance that she is fighting, irrespective of any material benefits that may accrue to her, for the deliverance of Europe from militarism. The public sentiment of the civilized world, outside of Turkey, is with England. The sentiment desires the destruction of the false god of militarism—a god with a mouth like a blasting fire and heating the universe with his radiant rays. He is the very antithesis in all regards of the God vision of the most saintly souls of the world. His triumph would make of the world a cosmic hell with man recreated as a God-beast after his own image.

"There is an Oriental story of a man who is about to enter into a great battle. The outcome of the impending fray he knows not. It may well mean his death. So he prays to his god for a full vision of his divine being, to see his god face to face ere he die. Then the vision comes of a great world-beast; a great swallower of other gods; of countless forms possessed of various army, stomachs, mouths, and eyes on all sides. Of wonderful and terrific form he was, with many gods entering into him, while his gaping mouth, fearful and terrific jaws, resembled the fire of destruction. It is this god of destruction and of death; this image of lowered, bestial manhood that must be cast out.

"Many of us cannot march out to fight this god of horrific men, but we can all help. Mr. Thompson concludes that sermon to which I have referred by saying: 'Can we be indifferent about those who are ready to suffer and to bleed for us? No! Brethren, pray and love must constrain us to pray to the God of armies, that we may give them with strength to the battle; teach their hands to war and their fingers to fight; and cover them in the hour of danger; that if they must not return to us adorned with the laurels of victory, they may bless them with a glorious death, and bestow upon them the crown of life. We should remember that prayer is the most likely way to obtain deliverance from all the ills we fear and a prosperous issue to all our lawful pursuits.'"

"Trey of Hearts" Here at Last! The Imperial's serial story, "The Trey of Hearts," reached town late Saturday night by I. C. R. and will be shown today and tomorrow. It was located in St. John's, P. Q. The second episode is so essential to a complete understanding of the story that nobody should miss it. The remainder of the bill—as noted in the advt.—Alice Joyce, Mary Pickford, new vaudeville, Miss Elsa Marie, Hearst Self Weekly and special views of St. John's soldiers, doctors and nurses en route to Europe—completes a rousing show. James O'Neill in "The Count of Monte Cristo" (Famous Players) on Wednesday.
