[From Stewart's Quarterly.] THE CONVENT PORTER. BY CARROLL RYAN, OTTAWA. By CARROLL RYA, OTTAWA.

He was an ancient, bearded man

Beneath the archway seated,

Who, through the summer, lone and long,

His Rosary rep-ared.

He rang the bell for matin prayers;—

At nountide for the reapers,

And, when the evening shadows foll,

He rang it for the keepers,

And, sometimes, too, he toiled a knell

For everlasting sleepers. From day to day he said his beads,
Beneath the archway staying;
The sun, arising, found him there,
And, secting, left him praying.
On him would little hands attend,
And little footfalls rattered;
Around him; where the fig-trees bend
Were purple treasures stattered;
The wise 'ring cypress was his friend.
For him the ivy chattered, But seldom at that convent gate
A traveller dismounted;
The outer world of love and hate
Passed by it unaccounted.
Monotonous, and quaint, and calm,
The prayerful seasons glided.
The vesper hymn and morning psalm
These days alone divided.
That by the dial, near the Palm,

So years went by until oue day The night cloud, westward rolling, Came round the Friar's old retreat Without the vesper tolling. The birds still song on ivy sprays, The children still were playing. The old man, as in former days, Seem the still song the still so
