

DO NOT DESPOND.
Clouds from your pathway,
But do not despair,
From through the gloom cheerily,
For, haply, beyond,
Soft sunlight gleaming
The shades dark and drear,
Your path, as the morning,
Is golden and clear.
Then budge up your pathway,
Yet do not despair—
But tread 'mid them bravely,
And doubt not, beyond
Some gap is in waiting,
Where wayfarers of green
Shall lead to broad meadows,
And waters serene.
Though troubles seem 'whirling,
Oh, do not despair—
Your best wrought, move calmly,
And trust that beyond
These hours of deep trial,
Which test you like gold,
Some gracious deliverance
Shall Heaven unfold.

LIVING WATERS.
How delightful the cool waters gurgling up from the perennial fountains of earth. In our native land amid the gay ramblings of childhood, how many a pure spring needs forth its liquid waters in salt and brine, while the mind of the traveller in other lands will instinctively turn to these fountains that flow on perpetually over earth's lovely landscape. Especially when we sojourn in a desert region or in a land "where no water is," will we be reminded of these living waters—of their purity and refreshment.
"Here are springs of crystal waters,
Ever welling out of stone!"
These waters of earth are valuable, not only because they refresh and satiate the craving thirst of the traveller, but also because they cost nothing. What constitutes their inestimable worth is the cheering fact that they are free. "Water, next to air, is the most indispensable of all products of nature." We have, I fear, not yet learned duly to appreciate the blessings of good water. Think a moment; how could we possibly do without it? Or how greatly we would be straitened were it very scarce; or how we should often be at a great loss to enjoy the luxury of a cooling draught of water if we should be obliged to purchase it with money. But living waters gush forth and flow through all the green fields, and among the verdure-clad hills of earth.
We remember reading somewhere, of an arctic well being bored in the desert, a land strangely destitute of water. The country was exceedingly parched and dry. The poor Arabs, sojourners in that country, felt very much interested in the success of the enterprise. After boring down into the bosom of the earth one hundred and seventy-seven feet, the company struck through the hard pan on a noble stream of living water. The water instantly rose in the pipes, pouring out a thousand gallons a minute. Aye, what a magnificent water! Yes, some twenty horseheads of water per minute, as after computation shows! A perennial fountain in the desert. It is said when at the moment the waters burst forth, and the population of the village came rushing to the spot rejoicing with great joy. "The old Shiek of old Rechee could not express his emotion; he threw himself upon his knees by the water and wept for joy." O my dear friends, we have not I fear learned by much as yet, to be thankful enough for abundance of pure, living, perennial waters.
But the waters of eternal life, how infinitely more precious and desirable to the thirsty pilgrim traveller on his way to heaven. He pants for it, drinks largely, and is abundantly satisfied. These living waters are free, and all may partake of them without money and without price. Come then, to the living waters, come! Drink deep, and with joy draw water from the wells of salvation. These perennial waters can quench the raging thirst and refresh the weary spirit by the way, rendering all beautiful and fruitful in their course.
"First is the fountain of living waters.
In him all fulness dwells. To this fountain all are cordially invited. Who shall stay away and perish for want of the waters of eternal life? None need stay away in fear that the demand will diminish the supply. There is enough, and enough for evermore. The waters of salvation flow on forever and forever. Here is no inexhaustible fountain:
"Ho! ye that pant for living streams,
And pass away and die;
Here you may quench your raging thirst
From springs that never dry!"

NEW PREACHER WITH AN OLD SERMON.
Springfield is one of the greatest thoroughfares in the interior of the Union. The Western, Hartford and New Haven, and Connecticut river railways, intersect at this point, and distribute their passengers North, South, East, and West. Between forty and fifty trains arrive and depart daily—the average number of passengers transported by the above named companies furnishing a daily aggregate of about three thousand five hundred. The whole number of men employed on these roads exceeds two thousand.
A correspondent, to whom we are indebted for these statistics, and who spent last Sabbath at the Massasoit house on his way from Rye Beach to Saratoga, writes:—"What a solemn sermon was that preached yesterday by the silent railways before the Massasoit! The constant flow of all railway centres on the days of old will still be the same on the day of rest. Not a wheel moved, not a sound broke the silence of the Sabbath hours. Even the goos of the hotel was not sounded, but guests were summoned to their meals by a messenger at their chamber doors. The streets of Pompeii are not more quiet than was this great public house, with twenty feet of the station-house of three railways, during the live long day.
A single train, carrying the mails, with a passenger car attached, arrives from Boston at about 10 o'clock p.m., and a similar train from New York. The average number of passengers by these trains is 321—or less than one per cent. of the average of the week day business. If all these Sunday travellers are continued to go by 'necessity or charity'—which may be doubted—it goes to show that only an infinitesimal percentage of Sunday travel is necessary and therefore lawful.
"On inquiry at the office of the Western road, I learn that the number of conductors, firemen, switch tenders and others, who are deprived of a part of their Sunday rest, for the accommodation of Sunday travellers, exceeds the whole number thus accommodated. But thousands are disturbed of their quiet along the two hundred miles traversed by this train; so that the balance is largely against even this single Sunday train, even if the pecuniary loss to the company be left out of the account.
"The humanity of the arrangements by which nearly the entire force of 2,000 men are secured of their Sabbath with their families, and in their churches, if they choose, must have its reflex influence on the health and morals of all concerned, and thus on the interests of the corporations making these provisions. There can be no doubt that more and better work will be done by such a corps of men than if they were driven to seven days' labor in a week. Pray, ask the directors of our Sabbath-breaking railways to spend a Sabbath at Springfield, and hear the new preacher with his old sermon. It will do them and their stockholders lasting good."

TRAVELLING COMPANIONS.
How rare is a good travelling companion! One who will neither bore you with sentimentalities of rocks and rivers, or delectate what is, should be—fret about every trifling misfortune of the way; or insist on dragging you forward on all conversational occasions with strangers, about whom you care nothing, and who care nothing for you; or would have you see every night at different stopping places, when the only boon you crave is a bath and a bed. In short, how rare is a person with that fine tact which at a glance can decide when and to whom to speak, and when to be silent; who need not be told in words what is evident in the languid eye and relaxed limb; who takes no offence at your necessary silence, and can understand that a human being is not to be constantly poked up with a long pole, like a beast at a menagerie, to show his paces to a gaping audience. In short, how blessed is tact, and how irresistible when joined with cultivated intellect.

VIRTUE, AND ITS REWARD.—At a late meeting of the Académie Française, the principal Mouton prize of three thousand francs, acts of virtue, was bestowed on Francois Durand, of Apt, (Vaucluse). The Academy in awarding the prize, were desirous of rewarding conjugal devotedness—that attachment to family ties which becomes tightened by misfortune—and, particularly that delicacy of feeling which the acquisition of a husband cannot extinguish, and which could not rest until his innocence had been clearly proved. Mme. Durand, a poor peasant woman, struck by misfortune, evinced a courage equal to the struggle which she was called upon to sustain. Her husband was accused of a capital crime, and brought before a court of justice, where, although serious charges were brought against him, he was acquitted by a small majority. Mme. Durand, who was convinced of his innocence, never ceased to support his courage while before his judges, and during the seven succeeding years she devoted her incessant efforts to the discovery and prosecution of the real criminals, and at length they were condemned, and the complete innocence of her husband proved to the most sceptical.

LET THE STOMACH HAVE ITS CRAVING.
In the diseases produced by bad food, such as scorbutic dysentery and diarrhoea, the patient's stomach often craves for and digests things, some of which certainly would be laid down in no dietary that ever was invented for the sick, and especially not for such sick. These are fruit, pickles, jams, gingerbread, fat of ham or of bacon, suet, cheese, butter, milk. These cases I have never met but by ones, and by twos, and by hundreds. And the patient's stomach was right, and the book and wrong. The articles craved for, in these cases, might have been principally arranged under the two heads of fat and vegetable acids. There is often a marked difference between men and women in this matter of sick feeding. Women's digestion is generally slower.—Florence Nightingale.

We have seen persons who gather in the parlor choicest flowers, just as they begin to open into full bloom and fragrance, lest some passer-by should tear them from the bush and destroy them. Does not God sometimes gather to heaven young and innocent children for the same reason—lest some rude hand may despoil them of their beauty?

An Indiana exchange, a strong partisan sheet, has quite a well written editorial on political honesty. The superiority of the article is supposed to be explained by the fact that men are most eloquent upon what they know the least of.

The aim of education should be to teach us rather how to think; rather to improve our minds so as to make us think for ourselves, than to load the memory with the thoughts of other men.

Interference is not to be measured by quantity, but consequences. "Strength of nature is youth," says Lord Bacon, "passes over many excesses, which are owing a man till his age."

Eternity is the Divine treasure-house, and hope is the window, by means of which mortals are permitted to see as through a glass, darkly, the things which God is preparing.

Man should carry life like a spirited falcon in his hand, allowing it to alight into the air, and being able to call it back again to earth whenever it is necessary.

Man creates more discontent to himself than ever is occasioned by others.

Let no leisure moment be unimproved; but prize it as you would gold.

Death is the only master who is his servants without a character.

January 26th, 1860.

For Sale or to Lease for a term of Years.
THAT Valuable Property, in the Township of Ramsey, known as "Woodside Mills," consisting of a FLOUR MILL with two runs of BURR STONES, a Superior SMUT MACHINE, an OATMEAL MILL, with two runs of Stones, one of which is a Burr.
The Mill is three and a half stories high, and most substantially built. There are also on the premises a KILN, capable of drying from 120 to 200 Bushels Oats at a time, a Frame House, for a Miller, a Blacksmith's Shop, with tools complete, two Stone Houses and Out buildings, with Stabling for eleven horses, Haylofts, Sheds, Coach Houses, &c. There are 200 acres of Land, about 80 of which are under cultivation. As there are other water privileges on the premises, furnishing an abundance of water power, a large amount of machinery could be erected in addition to that in operation.
For further particulars, apply to the Subscribers on the premises.
