

Note 'A'

It is noted by the President that the particulars of the second charge are probably improper in that the N.C.O. is "superior officer" to whom it is alleged the words were addressed is referred to as "the N.C.O. of the defaulters mess parade" and not by name.

The defending officer states that he has no objection to the charge as there is actually no doubt as to whom is meant.

The president decides that the trial may proceed on the trial as it stands.
