In Memoriam! Anniversary of the Death Father James Callaghan, S.S.

REMEMBERANCE and gratitude. like twin sisters, go hand in hand, along the avenues of life. When Rememberance calls up the names, the forms, the features, and the deeds forms, the features, and the deeds of the departed, it is Gratitude that suggests the perpetuation of their memories amongst those who know, admired or love them; when Grati-tude dictates memorials and prayers for those whose days of usefulness and of good on earth have been num-bered, it is Remerberance that tells the beads of memory's rosary, where-on she counts the virtues and the noble works of the holy dead. On the seventh day of this month Re-memberance speaks of the late be-loved and lamented priest — Father 'James Callaghan—whose beautiful life ended one year ago on that James Callaghan-whose on that life ended one year ago on that date; and in turn, Gratitude raising ther voice calls upon all who knew him, all who came within the circle him, all who came within the circle of his priestly influence, and all whom he ministered to in his mis-sionary career, to offer up to God such prayers and such good works as he would have most prized for the eternal happiness of his soul. as ne would have mate primes for his soul. When a person recalls, be it in the family circle, or in the larger do-main of social life, the name of one whose presence is missed and whose life was intimately associated with the lives of those present, it is gen-erally a custom to repeat some words, some special phrases, some characteristic remarks of the de-parted relative or friend. We seem to enjoy, in a species of melancholy pleasure, the retrospect and when we repeat the words that were fami-liar on the lips, now forever silent, the sentiment that is awakened is one of the most tender of which our nature is capable.

The League of the Women of France.

ords of M. Auguste Regnabel in the "Etudes" for January, ring like tocsin. But it would be a very bad mistake indeed to consider them exaggerated. France, which has led the way and still bears the palm in sanguinary revolutions, may easily see her fires rekindled. It will be a miracle if the present anti-religious persecution, the fanning of internal strife, the utterly pagan principles of education and public action adcated, the growing parliamentary predominance of extreme social revolutionists, can go on long without disaster.

of knowing their country better than we do through the partisan reports of journalists, who would teach us Let us give F Europe. There are men in ce, men aspiring to dominate, their own ends quite without from Europe. <text><text><text><text> France, react, their own dig quite without right to the good of their coun-try. There are men in France, and many of them, who wildly dream of the second second second second to the second second second second the interests of which they are quite international secret organizations, to the interests of which they are quite international secret organizations, to the interests of which they are quite international secret organizations, to the interests of which they are quite interests of which they are quite international secret organizations, to the interests of which they are quite international secret organizations, to the interests of which they are quite interests of which they are done of so-ting legislative power, continue to the and attempting the very or-constructions. The mame heads, or more indiffernounced to the hatred of the ignor-ant by those who hold political pow-er. We demand respect for our faith employees of the State and the mem-bers of Religious Orders have con-sciences, and for them also we de-mand liberty. Away with those who love not their country! Away with the socialists and sectaries! Those are the evil-doers and the tyrants. The women of France are for their country, for the rights of property, for liberty, and they unite to defend them." THE SITUATION NOW .- The they should expel from their native country the nuns, whom the rest of the world venerates; for even when these apply for absurd authorization to live in their convents, the muoi cipal councils refuse it.

The administration of justice, a nation's most necessary safeguard, is frequently atrociously and bitter-ly one-sided in France-one-sided in favor of the sectaries. Men are so exposed to persecution on accoun of their religion-the hereditary reli of their religion—the heredulary reli-gion of the nation—that the lowliest official fears to send his child to a religious school. In fact, the latest measure under consideration in the Senate will destroy all religious schools. Every sort of association —financial, athesist, socialist, anarchical—is untramneled. But the hum-

IN THE WITN SS AND GATHOLIC CHRONICLE

we come, this week, to commen-te the death of Father James, initing in the prayers that are ered, upon this anniversary o ion, for the repose of his price ioul, and by reproducing the of the last sermon he preached il, and by reproducing the last sermon he pr . Patrick's Church.

HEAVEN .- "We know, th

HEAVEN.-'We know, that, when he shall appear, we shall see like to him, because we shall see like to him, because we shall see him as he is.'' I Ep. St. John iii. 2. The world that we inhabit, though gloomy and dreary, has its bright and cheerful side as well. A few scat-tered sunny rays strays from acfors the sky to light up our path and re-mind us of the haven of rest with its joys without weariness, its pleas-ures without pain. Felicity upon earth varies with the source whence it springs. The Stoic seeks it in the repression of all sensual gratifica-tion; the Epicure in the indulgence of every animal instinct; the Flato-nian in the observance of the natu-ral law; the Christian in the guard-ianship of sanctifying gracs. The Christian shares the purset of all delights for he alone follows his sublime vocation, that is, to know, love, serve God here and then see. possess, enjoy Him eternally as He is. Tha Heaven is the future abode and designess for he affine follows his sublime vocation, that is, to know, love, serve God here and then see, possess, enjoy Him eternally as Ho is. That Heaven is the future abode of humanity is portrayed in the As-cension of Christ from Mount Oli-vet. Its location, its boundaries, its latitude and longitude, its meas-urements, its distance from our planet, no scientist has made known. Many discoveries far easier yet re-main shut out to the lens of the telescope, and even were the zone where the Blessed Spirits dwell to be ever observed by the astronomer, he should be as much in the dark as heretofore respecting their present status, because their spirital rap-tures cannot be appreciated by the standard of a physical or material instrument. The task is as hope-less as the attempt of the surgeon, while operating on the human body, to pry into the workings of the soul.

THE IMPARTIAL 'HISTORIAN cannot but admit the universal concursus of nations and, in the belief of Heaven and notice the difference between Christian and natural civilbetween Christian and natural civil-ization due to its influence. The Gentile shaped his conception of it on his own national tastes and cus-toms. The classic Greek qualified it a stage for public speaking; the war-like Celt, a battle field, the Ameri-can Indian, a hunting ground; the lustful Turk, a suite of seven har-seme, the nomadic Buddhist, a bird or sacred animal, a prince or the ether of the world. Christianity alone solves the problem. According to Catholic teaching man can see God in the triple light of Reason, Revelation and Glory. These obser-vatories rise over each other at dif-ferent heights and outline the Deity with more distinctness the nearer they approach it. Reason, the lowest grade, surveys the works of the creation, detects overywhere their oneness in defin and in execution and traces them to the one Supreme Cause, God, who imprints on all and each the image of His one Divine Nature. Revela-r tion or Faith contempates Him from a higher platform. Its mouthization due to its influence. The of nature with the trinity of person-alities in God It drops not the curtain that hides them from our actual gaze. We behold them through a reflector, and long to look upon their sweet faces like a grate-ful nation awaiting the unveiling of a patrict's bronze or marble figure. "We see now through a glass in a dark manner." St. Paul to Cor. lat Ep. xiii. 12. Perception by vision or sight is the privilege of the soul that closes its eye to earth and opens it to heaven. It views God from the loftiest standpoint, that is, in the light of glory, in the unity of His nature and the Trinity of His personalities : "We know, writes St. John, that, when He shall ap-pear, we shall be like to him: be-cause we shall see him as he is." Ist Ep. iii. 2, or as St. Paul remarks : "Then face to face. Now I know in part; but them I shall know even as I am known." Ist Ep. Cor. xili, 12. THE SPIRIT, however, rich in

THE SPIRIT, however, rich in merit at the close of life cannot enter into God's heavenly presence without the help of the glory. This resplendent luminary ac-complishes what santifying grace alone cannot achieve. The XVth Ecumenic Council held at Vienna A.D. 1311 under Clement X. con-demned the following proposition : "The soul does not need the light of glory to elevate her to the sight and enjoyment of God." The beatific of glory to elevate her to the sight and enjoyment of God." The beatific vision is, born of the light of glory. It fills the elect with unspeakable beatitude that only God and they can rightly value for on the one hand they alone possess Him for Whom they were created while on the other He draws them to Himself with such strength and sweetness as to let no adverse attachment sover or weaken the link between Him and them : "Come, ye blessed of my Fa-ther, possess you the kingdom pre-pared for you from the foundation of the world." St. Matt. xxv. 34. The effect of the light of glory on the soul is twofold, intellectual and moral. It preserves her from error and from vice. It imparts infalli-bility and impecability. Her intelmoral. It preserves her from error and from vice. It imparts infalli-bility and impeccability. Her intel-ligence sees in God the substance of things, beholds without pain the do-ings of the wicked and witnesses with delight the deeds of the just, and her will revels in God's love and in the companionship of the beatified. The doctrine of that im-mediate possession is clearly defined in the Ecuminical Council under Eu-gene IVth A.D. "The souls of those who after receiving baptism have in-curred no stain of sin whatever or after incurring such stain have been purified in or out of the body-- are at once received into heavon and clearly see God Himself as He is in three persons and one substance, some, however, more perfectly than others, according to the diversity of their merits. "The admission of the body, on the contrary, lies generally in the future. If we except the bod-ies of Jesus and Mary, all others in-discriminately are doomed to sojourn in the narrow cell of the grave till the Last Day. The two elements in man, the spiritual and the material rcle, its en emblem of eternity, decorates its en sign and emblazons its cont-of-arms A million years cannot satiate our hunger for happiness. Unlimited dur A million years cannot satisfe our hunger for happiness. Unlimited dur-ation alone responds to the aspira-tions of the human heart. Heaven were not Heaven if one cloud dark-ened its horizon, one ripple ruffled its surface, one tear flowed, one sigh be drawn. It is the only true home "We have not here a lasting city, but we seek one that is to' come." St. Paul to the Heb. xiii. 14.

THE IMPRIDENCE of settling down here as if this was our per manent home we were to abide por-manently here is illustrated in the "Lay not up to yoursely s treasures on earth, where the rust, and moth consume, and where thieves break through and steal. But iay up to yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither the rust, nor moth doth con sume, and where thieves do not break through, nor steal." St. Matt. vi. 19-20. Many have sung licaven in poetry and in prose but like the artist who copies a scene from life they felt that their best productions are only feeble imitations. The in spired writers have described it with all the charms of oriental imagery to convey to the popular mind as far as words go, an impression of its blessedness. The metaphor does not impoverish a truth. It cnriches it by clothing it in an attractive garb. "They shall be inebriated with the plenty of thy house; exclaims the Psalmist, and thou shalt make them drink of the torrent of thy pleasure For with thee is the fountain of life. and in thy light we shall see light. and in thy light we shall see light." xxxv. 9, 10. The pen and the tongue of St. Paul failed in the at-tempt to picture it, though he was waited in spirit to the "Third Henv-en" and, while strolling through its shady groves, caught a glimpse of the beauty that stole through its transparent walls: "That eve hath it entered into the heart of man, what things God hath prepared for them that love him." I Ep. Cor. ii. 9. If a look at the Transfiguration on Mount Tabor threw into cestasy 9. If a look at the Transfiguration on Mount Tabor threw into costasy Peter, James and John, if a walk and conversation with the risen Sa-viour thrilled with undescribable emotion the hearts of the two dis-ciples of Emmaus, how they do ex-ult who are plunged into the immon-sity of God, shining too as stars of greater or smaller magnitude around the Eternal Sun, adoring, loving, praising Him, mutually exchanging their thoughts and desires in ever varying strains and linked together in sympathetic intercession in be-half of the churches, Suffering and Militant. Militant.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1902.

THE, EVANGELIST ST. JOHN has left to posterity in the XXI, and XXII, chapters of his Apocalypse a emarkable sample of word-painting in his sketch of the New Jerusalem; a holy city, bright as a polished mira holy city origin as a pointee mir-ror, its twelve pearl-gates with the names of the twelve tribes of Israel and at each an angel seatinel on guard; with its jasper foundation and twelve others of precious stones with an Apostle's name on each; with its throne for God and the Lamb; with its gold-paved street, its sparkling fountains, its tree of life; with its flood of light flowing from the crystalline splendors of od's glory; with its Book of Life: with its citizens free from defilement sorrowing, mourning, weeping, cry-ing or dying, face to face with the Sovereign Lord and ruling with Him everlastingly. Heaven is a gift. The highest and the lowest among the blessed have to confess that God confers the favor on whom He leases: "Whom, writes St. Paul, to the Romans, he predestinated them he also called. Whom he called them he also justified. And whom he justified, them he also glorified." viii. 80. It is a prize. It matters not when the laborer is invited to the vineyard, whether at early dawn, noon or the cool of the day of mortal life, he has to toil hard to earn the penny of the Gospel. No victory is chronicled in history unless the enemy be routed captured or slain. The Christian dons at baptism the cross, girds the sword and grapples with his foes. Error and immorality challenge him to a handto-hand struggle for supremacy. The combat begins and ends with the throes of death, and then the promised land breaks in upon the view. He gets big interest on a small capital, sows meagrely and reaps abundantly and wins a crown for a trifle. His own merits availed him not without his merciful Redeemer when in debt and in prison, Christ flew to his rescue, bailed him out, sealed the bond in the handwriting of His Blood, and paid the stipulated ransom. Alas! man is much slower in answering to divine grace than in furthering worldly enterprise and gain. He cares less for Heaven than for earth. If only one-half his zeal were devoted to the attainment his vocation. his short and bitter pilgrimage would be more honorably and more profitably spent. If he then desire to reach the gaol, he has to raise his thoughts above what is transient , and fleeting, fix them on the immoveable hills of the New Sion, shape his conduct accordingly, and build on the solid foundation of Tł  If the "Devil's A vocatus Diaboli" pointed to plead th matters of beatifica ation is called, we sistance in compo against Joan of A Orleans, he could n call in the editors pondents whose d appear in the yello United States. Pos gain a considerable from some of the magazines. The hist which the Maid of (a conspicuous part, national prejudices judgments of some life and her death : political standpo political standpo-Church, in order to as to her sanctity, more than the debri-tory. A saint is n a day, nor is the p that of creating a t declaring an eminen the veneration of a ABUSE NOT A will not occupy spa the pretended argur really a long chain unsubstantiated accu set forth in some of erican and English erican and English cerning the life a Joan of Arc. The equally the Frote cannot well divest h tional dislike tha career of the heroin genders in his breas any people willingly killed a saint. No r having made mar persecution and unw ments and execution tion of Joan woo that her murderers that her murderers with the Roman tyr gave so many saints the Church and to barbaric tortures an

mmm

RESTLESS LIT

Peevishmess and Slee

When babies are re peevish it is the surv of illness. Well babie and are cheerful and awake. When baby many mothers give s ing" medicines. whit many mothers give as ing" medicines, whit ates that deaden but the trouble. What medicine that will g root of the trouble sleep well, eat well in a natural way. is Baby's Own Table sold under an abs that they contain ne other harm drugs. A have used them for t speak of them in te praise. Mrs. Albert ford, says: "My ba five months old, ha

Sign That Baby

SATURDAY, FE

++++++++

Christian virtue. Amen

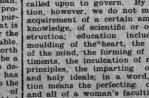

tent themselves with the irregular work which falls naturally to their share in an ordinary household. Those women for whom the nature of their circumstances or their bra,ns make other employment im-possible, play hockey with a praise-worthy industry and keep their playing engagements with business-like exactitude." That there is much truth in all playing engagements with business-like exactitude." That there is much truth in all this we will not attempt to gain-say; but we are forced, from expe-rience, to the conclusion that the work is not always taken up as a mere pastime, but rather is it a necessity in more cases than we can imagine; while, on the other hand, the fever for amusement and enter-tainment is actually more character-istic of the age than is the anxiety for work. The world has became restless and unnerved in consequence of the constant high pressure at which men and women travel to-wards the grave. They cannot bear to be quiet, they cannot pause to think, much less to study or medit-ate. It was the meditating and quiet students of the, middle ages that left an heritage of intellectual wealth to the world; the people of the present are the spendthrift de-space the legacies that took centur-ies of privation and labor to hoard up and the age than diabor to hoard duty of deputies or ministers to edu-cate them, it is ours. For this sacred task we demand liberty. Christian mothers, we demand that our faith be respected-we, who fail not to respect the opinions of others. We demand that Christ, whom we adore, be treated not as an enemy by the laws of our country, nor de-nounced to the hatred of the ignor-ant by those who hold political pow-

It is impossible for us to agree with all that writers like Sarah Grand produce; but we find even such authors flashes of truth that cannot be ignored. Contributing to the New York press a short article upon "Woman in 1901 and Her Fu-ture," this writer has given expres-sion to some very healthy views con-cerning the sphere of woman and the false attitude of the modern woman. Her object is to show that the pro-per education of woman for the pur-poses "of developing the best that is in her to theglory of God and for the good of mankind" is most desirable. She tells us that "no woman worth the name has ever wanted to be a man," and that the fear of this de-sire to go beyond her sphere has caused most of the opposition to the enlargement of woman's sphere of action. If these views were wedded to the unchanging principles of the Catholic Church concerning woman and her sphere, we believe that they would be productive of immense be-neft to the gentler sx. and her sphere, we believe that they would be productive of immense be-nefit to the gentler sex. The Church is not opposed to the education, and the higher education of woman; on the contrary, the in-situtions out of number that the same Church controls, the great con-vents, and seminaries for female edu-cation prove clearly how desirous that true mother is to endow wo-ment that she is capable of receiv-fing. In no other religion on earth is woman honored and exalted as she is in the Catholic Church. The very idea of the Mother of God, the very idea of the Mother of God, the very idea of the Mary-for maiden and for mother-constitute the most glowing tribute that earth has ever paid to woman in any form and in any sphere. Hence it is that if Sarah Grand were to have based her views upon the Catholic doctrine and practice concerning the femala section of the human family she would have written something actu-all generations. Another remark in that article has attracted our attention, and is de-serving of careful note. It - reads it work of a sphere table is that if you won the detable is de-serving of careful note. It - reads it would have written something actu-alty buentical to the women of all generations.

<text><text><text>

ical—is untrammeled. But the hum-ble, self-sacrificing Sister, who spends her life amidst the conta-gion of the sick, or who would teach children the way of Christian vir-tue, is expelled from school and hos-pital and even from fatherland.

<text>

Never lose an opportunity of see-ing anything beautiful. Beauty is God's handwriting. Welcome it in every fair face, every fair sky, every fair flower, and thank Him earnestly with your eyes.

It is to Jesus Christ we owe the truth, the tandarness, the purity, the warm affection, the holy aspiration, which go together in that endearing word-bome; for it is He Who has made obscience so besutiful and si-fection so holy; it is He Who has bfought the Father's home so near, and has taught us that love is of had

The London "Spectator" has un-dertaken to show that life in our age goes by "time table." A cou-ple of remarks, in the article to which we refer, we think well worth heproducing. Our English contem-porary says:--"Probably since the world began there was never a period when men wasted their time as little as they do now. Whether they use it well or II, they at least do not let it slip away empty. Never was the fascination of work so potent as at the present moment, and never be-fore were the same keenness and con-centration displayed in the pursuit of distraction?" In explanation of these remarks we find the following :--"The greater numer of men de-sire to be actively uselul or actively

"The grant of the be which the unmarried women of the middle and upper middle class em-brace work in any shape or form is a great sign of the times. It is not what is called occupation but regu-lar employment which they seek, and they will acept employment which they seek, and they will ac-opt drudgery, and even privation

The Cry of the Hour, best of privation and labor to hoard up. This activity is far from a healthy sign. It is a kind of moral locometor ataxia; that has seized upon the race and is leading it to ultimate dissolution.

Bishop Burke on

Coronation Oath

op Burke, in the Cathedrai of manazuiate Conception at Al-last Sunday, took occasion to to the oath which King Rô-VI, will take at his corono. The Bishop said he wished orld, and especially all Cath-to know just what references at contained, and while the of England was swearing that octaine of the divine presence most blessed Bucharist, was and the scriftee of the Mass a stition, he wanted every Gath o raise his heart to the Al-y and make a most devout act the Disko contained the Mose a solid event at the divine presence in the same a most devout act the Disks Parliament should be and the site of the Mose a p de 1, as five months old, haver, any out of the months old, haver, cross and peeving very constpated and very cross and peeving the second secon water, or crushed to be given with absolu youngest infant. Mot try them will never any other medicine ones. Sold by all de cine or sent post pai box by addressing th Medicine Co., Brocky

While the remarks Johnson, of the McCl gical Seminary, at it conference in Chicag apply to the Catholic they are of such sign actness that we will from them. The for with which the clergy that occasion fully a small importance in usal fatts as we find in our day. The Rey. "I ask you minister your texts and topic that