In 1843 there was ordained to the priesthood one who ten years later went to the Pacific slope as the first Missionary Bishop of Oregon and Washington. Previous to this he was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Savannah. He set out to pastor of the First Presbyterian terianism, with the above result.

The death is announced of Canon Elliott, incumbent of Killiney, Co. Dublin. His death is a real loss to the Irish Church. His strength lay in his committee work, at which he was indefatigable. His most strenuous work was in connection with the Church of Ireland Temperance Society, the Home Reunion Committee of the General Synod, and the Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews.

About £2,500 have already been subscribed towards the cost of the school which it is proposed to erect at Harwarden as a memorial of the late Canon Harry Drew. The cost of the proposed memorial is expected to be about £3,000. Among the subscribers to the fund is the Duke of Westminster, who has given £100. The late Canon Drew's deep interest in the numerous National schools in his extensive parish is well known. Not long before his death he raised a sum of about £5,000 for the purpose of putting them in order to meet the requirements of the Flintshire Education Authority.

Some notable converts were baptized at Aligarh, in North India, last Easter Day. Two were converts from Mohammedanism, both of good family. Of the third man the Rev. W. McLean, of the Church Missionary Society, writes: "He was a Hindu, of royal blood, Kunwar Maharaj Singh, a nephew of Raja Shem Singh [recently elected to represent the Indian Christian community on the Legislative Council of the United Provinces.] He possesses considerable property in Bijnor, but made Aligarh his headquarters while he was being prepared for baptism. The Kunwar Sahib has promised to teach his wife, and assures me that she has no objection to being baptized."

The most noteworthy factor in the achievement of Liverpool Cathedral is not the liberality which the project has evoked. Liberality may always be counted upon in Liverpool for large-hearted, skillfully-directed enterprises, and the generosity which has already contributed nearly £400,000 to the great undertaking will be capable of contributing more than as much again before the cathedral stands complete. Nor is it the fact that the project has been largely inspired, guided, and financed by laymen. Nor is it that a noble restraint is being practised in extending the work over a whole generation, remarkable as such restraint is in an age whose most salient characteristic is its haste.
