WHAT CANADA LOSES BY EXPORT OF PULPWOOD TO THE UNITED STATES

(Montreal Herald)

The strong movement to which the Herald directed attention some months ago, as growing in force and intensity, in favor of a change in the fiscal conditions that govern the exportation of pulpwood, has found expression in articles that have appeared in many journals as well as in the representations made, this week to the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Customs by an influential delegation representing the industry.

The facts that have been industriously brought to light by special writers who have investigated the question, as well as by practical authorities engaged in the industry, seem to point to the conclusion that Canada, with probably the greatest supply in the world of timber of the finest quality, for paper manufacture, has made comparatively little progress in the production of paper, and that the cause of the slow advancement in this particular sphere while the evidences of activity in other directions are unmistakable, is the law which enables the American producer to import the raw material from Canada, manufacture it into paper and sell the finished product into this country again to the detriment of home enterprise.

The remedies suggested for this condition of things at the present time are the imposition of an export duty on pulpwood by the Federal Government, or the passing of general legislation by the Dominion Parliament similar to that already enforced in the Province of Ontario, prohibiting entirely the exportation of pulpwood.

It is established by figures derived from official sources that the Dominion is the second best customer the United States has for paper, and it is contended that all the paper we buy from there can be produced at home from the raw material that our own forests supply. It is from the province of Quebec that the largest purchases of the raw material are made for the States. The question is, therefore, of vital interest to the people of this province. It is claimed that not only all the forests of this province stripped of pulpwood, a most valuable asset that could be made an important factor in industrial development, but that it promotes bogus settlement on Crown Lands by bringing men who move from place to place, leaving the land behind them bereft of the most valuable part of their timber wealth.

The two strongest arguments against the prohibition of the export of pulpwood are that it would discourage settlement by depriving the settler of a profitable market for his timber and would at the same time provoke retaliatory legislation by the United States. The reply to these contentions is that while the settler might be deprived of a portion of his present market, a new and valuable one would be created at home as the result of the development that would arise from the new conditions.

THE VIEWS OF MR. J. R. BOOTH

Mr. J. R. Booth, millionaire lumberman, of Ottawa, said in a recent interview, that the farmer and settler might be at some disadvantage for a year or so, but it would soon be found that they would get as much for the pulpwood they had to sell as formerly, and in the end they would be benefited rather than otherwise. This is how Mr. Booth argues the question out:

"On an average it takes one and a half cords of wood to make a ton of paper. For that cord and a half the farmer receives not more than $4.50. That is the limit of the extent to which the buyers of pulpwood for export help this country. Add the cost of transportation out of the country, and their is a trifle more left within our boundaries. Look at it from another point of view: If that cord and a half of pulpwood were manufactured into paper in Canada, there would be expended in the making alone some $24. Would it not be better to bring about a condition where such an amount could be expended here rather than continue a system which allows our raw material to go out of the country for such a trifling return as I have mentioned?"

So far as the possibility of the American retaliatory measures is concerned Mr. Booth, like most of papermakers who have been interviewed on the subject regard the fear as in the nature of a false alarm. The Americans would find that they were making matters worse for themselves by assuming such an attitude. He was convinced that the stopping of the export of pulpwood would compel a number of American pulp and paper mills to establish mills in this country, and would lead to the erection and operation of mills by capitalists not now in business. Coincidentally there would be the establishment of a number of factories for the production of machinery used in pulp and paper-making. Under present conditions, a large part of this machinery has to be purchased in the United States and a considerable duty has to be paid on it.

THE FREE TRADERS VIEW.

In looking over the objections urged against a change of policy as regards pulpwood the free trader's view point must not be ignored. This has been expressed by Mr. Booth's fellow townsman, Senator Edwards, who regards the agitation for an export duty as the original sin of those who want to circumscribe the market and make owners of pulpwood sell at the prices they dictate. He declared himself to be in favor of manufacturing the raw material in Canada, but said he, "I do not want any Chinese legislation to help me." The senator, who is the head of a great lumber company, was emphatic in his declaration. "If," said he, "the Canadian people with the most numerous and the best water powers in the world, the greatest quantity of available spruce for the making of pulp, and labor as good as that which can be found anywhere else cannot get along in that particular industry without such help as some claim they must have, they had better go and die; they are not fit to live. I want the other fellow who is not going to build a mill either because he cannot afford it, or for any other reason, to be at liberty to sell his material whenever he can get the most for it—whether in Canada or the United States. Consider this also. Nothing could be more detrimental to the interests of this country than that all the men who can do so should build pulp and paper mills. They would destroy the business which is being developed as fast as is good for Canada."

Quinsey, sprains and Swelling's Cured.

"In November, 1901, I caught cold and had the quinsey. My throat was swollen so I could hardly breathe. I applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me relief in a short time. In two days I was all right," says Mrs. L. Cousins, Otterburn, Mich. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment and is especially valuable for sprains and swellings. For sale by all druggists.

Edmonton, Alta., Oct. 9.—Inspector C. H. West, formerly of Regina, is in the city, from Lesser Slave Lake, where he has been stationed for the last seven years. Speaking of his work among the Indians, Dr. West said that he had charge of the Beaver Indians, Crees, Chipewyans, Slavees, and other tribes. The Indians were just holding their own in point of numbers, the deaths each year being about equal to the births.

Speaking of the country in the Slave Lake and Peace River district Inspector West grew enthusiastic. He thought the Peace River country would be opened and settled before the Saskatchewan country. The crops in parts of Alberta were excellent this year and were harvested before the frost.
