CHAPTER II

This and Tide wait for no man, and in order to keep pace with time, we must travel a railroad apeed if we expect to poses ourselves of the tide there is in our stillers. The passes very slow with the youthful mind. But with the middle aged man, how swift? Swifter than a weavers shirtle, we are tells. Yes, guatemen, he world is growing wiser and needer—weaker—weaker in superation and idolatry—wiser in training up the mind to perfect manhood—keeping will our appealine and passions under subjection—cluthing the body with the first, per sale by nearest, and most firsthoustile productions of the NEW WORLE CLOTEING WITCHEST, until you become like the lilly of the valy, which neither tolls nor spina, yet bolomon, in all his glory, was not awayed like one of these.
