CARLERS Frewart, Eq.

Dars Sir,—In my last letter, it informed you that by. Thore's purchases, up to that time, were limited to two Clydeshale Horses, which he had left in Glasgow, and that we had not then succeeded in making any positive arrangement for their convergance to the island, although we were in communication with the secondside of miles, with the bape of effecting that object at an early period. I subsequently received a proposition from Mearr. Stainbank to afford the necessary occumulation for either two or three Horses on the arrangements with Thora, and asse with Mr. Dones, who was mentioned the Thora of the second the second to the second to the control of the second to the control of the second to the commute his five for a need calary, provided the amount thereof should be determined by the laverage amount of the fees of that office for the last three or four years. He certainly would not desire to see that officer, with respect to the resumeration to be allowed him for his public services, cut down too low; yet, in determining the amount of the salary to be establised for the office, care, he thought, ought to be taken to exclude from the data on which the average of fees was to be struck, whatever charges had been made, by the present Atterney General unauthorised by previous practice in his office. With respect to the charges made by the Queen's Printer, it could not, he thought, be denied that it was necessary to provide, if possible, some mode of paying for the public services performed in that office, which would afford a sufficient guarantee against excess of expenditure therein. Ever since he had first had a seat in the Assembly, the charges made on account of public printing had been a subject of grave complaint in the Legislature: and yet, ever since, they had been increasing year after year. There had, no doubt, been an increase of business in that department; but when it was found that the country had to pay as much as £800 a year for printing, it was certainly high time for the representatives of the people to make serious enquiry concerning it, with a view to the restriction of it within properly economical bounds. If the House could pretty nearly ascertain the amount of public business to be done annually in the office of the Queen's Printer, taking, as a guide, a fair scale of rates, in charging, the proposition for the establishing of a just salary for the Queen's Printer, taking, as a guide, a fair scale of rates, in charging, the proposition for the establishing of a just salary for the Queen's Printer, taking, as a guide, a fair scale of rates, in charging, the proposition for the catorney General could easily be defined; and, therefore, there could be but little difficulty in commuting his services, might have it in his power unfairly to devolve upon the Solicitor General the performance of duties which he would have preferred discharging himself, if allowed to charge for them. The hon. the Speaker then took occasion to contrast, most favourably for the present Solicitor General, Joseph Hensley, Eq.) the official character of that gentleman, particularly with respect to the moderation of his charges, with that, on the same score, of a gentleman who held that appointment several years ago, whose accounts, he said, were never either very small in amount, or few and far between. With respect to the Attorney Generalship, how much weight soever ought to attach according to the opinion expressed by one hon. member, to the consideration of the previous course of study necessary to qualify a man for the proper discharge of the duties of that office, and of the expense consequent upon maintaining a style of living in accordance with the dignity which was supposed to attach to the appointment; he (the hon the Speaker) was of opinion that the ligitimate advantages connected with the appointment, were more than sufficient to counterbalance all such considerations. In the first place, the appointment to the office of Attorney General placed a man at the very top of his profession; and, in the next, besides investing him with such a reputation as seldom, if over failed greatly to extend his private professional practice, it place him in a positive advantages, there were no drawbacks whatever; and, as had been said by the Hon. the Leader of the Government, if all these positive advantages, there were no drawbacks whatever; and, as had been said by the Hon. the Leader of the Government, if all the favorable circumstances connected with it, were considered, it would appear to be the very best of all the Government appointments. The present incumbent of that office, had not had, like the Colonial Secretary and the Treasurer, to abandon his home in the country, and, at an immediate sacrifice, although for prosp Dear Sir, yours truly,

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL do not recognize the Report of the Speech of the Hon. Mr. Young, as published in the Advertizer of Thursday last—that speech having been prepared by Mr. Young himself. The reporter of the Council has been directed to furnish the Press with a report of the speech from the notes which he took at the time. Re-opening of the Baptist Chapel, Ch. Town.
This Chapel,—which has been removed to the corner of Great George and King Streets, without esstaining any material injury,—was opened on last Lord's Day. The Rev. Mr. Raud preached in the morning,—the Rev. W. H. Hobbs taking part in the service. The Rev. Mr. Knox preached in the afternoon and evening. All the services were deeply interesting, and the congregations large and attentive.

A Soiree, in aid of the Chapel Fund and the Sab-bath School will take place on Friday next, in the Temperance Hall, when addresses will be delivered on Sabbath Schools, the claims of Seamen, and Chris-tian Union, by Ministers and friends of different denothe Government appointments. The present incumbent of that office, had not had, like the Colonial Secretary and the Treasurer, to abandon his home in the country, and, at an immediate sacrifice, although for prospective beneft, to establish himself in a respectable residence in town; and naither was he, as the same hongestiement town; and naither was he, as the same hongestiement town; and naither was he, as the same hongestiement town; and naither was he, as the same hongestiement town; and naither was he, as the same hongestiement town; and naither was he, as the same hongestiement town; and naither was he, as the same hongestiement of his profession or from holding other appointments, or engaging in other lucrative speculations, as was bvident from the fact of his being at once Attorney General and Judge of Probate, and, besides Agencies, being engaged in the business of a private banker. As to the amount of his official Bills for the last year, (a full consideration of which, with those of previous years, would be necessary in determining, for what amount of salary his fees ought to be commuted,) that could not, at present be determined, for the last quarter's account could not be got at—it was, in legal phrase, son as timestus. In providing a salary for that officer, the House, as he had already said, ought carefully to define all the duties which he would have to performed, on account of it, for the Government: and it ought also, at These Reprins have been in auccessful operation in this country for twenty years, and their circulation is constantly on the increase, notwithstanding the competition they encounter from American periodicals of a similar class, and from the numerous Eciectics and Magazines made up of selections from foreign periodicals. This fact shows clearly the high estimation in which they are held by the intelligent reading public, and affords a guarantee that they are established on a firm basis, and will be continued without interruption.

Although these works are distinguished by the political shades above indicated, yet but a small portion of their contents is devoted to political subjects. It is then titlerary character which gives them their chief value, and in that they stand confessedly far above all other journals of their class. Blackwood, still under the masterly guidance of Christopher North, manntains its ancient celebrity, and is, at this time, unessally attractive, from the serial works of Bulwer and other literary notables, written for that magazine, and first appearing in its columns, both in Great Britian and in the United States. Such works as "The Caxtons" and "My New Novel," (both by Bulwer), "My Peninsular Medal," "The Green Hand," and other serials, of which numerous rival editions are issued by the leading publishers in this country, have to be erials, of which numerous rival editions are issued by scrais, of which numerous rival cuttions are assued the leading publishers in this country, have to be reprinted by those publishers from the pages of Blackwood, after it has been issued by Mesers.
