THE RETURN.

BY MARY E. MANNIX.

Across the desert waste we sped; The cactus gloomed on either hand,-Wild, weird, grotesque each frowning

Uprearing from the sand Through dull, gray dawn and blazing

Like fornace fire the quivering air, Till darkness fell, and the young moon. Smiled forth serene and fair.

A single star adown the sky Shone like a jewel, clear and bright; We heard the far coyote's cry Pierce through the silent night.

Then morning, - bathed in purple Beyond, the grand, eternal hills; With sunny, emerald vales between.

Crossed by a thousand rills. Sweet groves, green pastures; buzz

On rugged cliffs; the blessed sea, And then-the lights of home!

Passed 15 Worms.

I gave Dr. Lowe's Worm Syrup to my little girl two and a half years eld; the result was that she passed 15 round worms in five days. MRS. B. Roy, Kilmanagh, Ont.

"Yet I am glad that I succeede in pulling you through," the doctor rejoined. "The fact is I believe in your innocence, and I trust it may be made apparent some day."

The prisoner's countenance brightened. "God bless you for saying that," he replied, pressing the doctor's hand gratefully. "It is the first word of human sympathy that I have heardfor weeks. I cannot venture to entertain the hope of ob taining justice on earth, but I look forward to it all the more confidently hereafter."

The doctor turned away, to hide the emotion that these words awoke within his breast. In common with many other medical students he had made shipwreck of his faith through the pernicious teaching of unbeliev. ing lecturers. Now he was compelled to acknowledge that there was something sublime in the courage wherewith belief in the justice of God and in the immortality of the soul inspired a man. What would an unbeliever have done in the place of this priest? he asked himself. He would long ago have made away with himself in utter despair.

Could Father Montmoulin bave forseen that his patient endurance was the germ which ultimately bore fruit in the doctor's conversion, that knowledge would have given him far more pleasure than the kind

Onward sped the Durance, now in a northeasterly direction, and ere long the mountain heights of New Caledonia appeared on the horizon. On the fiftieth day of the voyage the recis surrounding the island became visible. At a signal from the steamer a tiny boat came tossing on the waves, bearing the pilot, who was to guide the vessel through the dangerous entrance to the barbor; and be fore long the Durance cast anchor in the roadstead between the peninsular Duclos and the island of Nu, The convicts were all marshalled. On the beach the barracks of the convicts prison stood in long 10ws covered to right and left by the cannon of the forts, while the barren bills of the little island rose in the background. To the left, behind the bay in which lies Porte de France, the chief town of New Calcdonia, which was not discernible from the ship, the rocky summits of the large island rose to the clouds. A tropical sun poured its dazzling beams on this unfamiliar landscape, and even the most degraded criminal could not repress a sigh, as the thought rose in his mind how far his bome was left behind. Eather Montmoulin, at any rate, felt keenly, when the vision of his country and And scent of flower; a dash of foam all who were dear to him rose up before him, and he realized that half bemisphere separated h m from them, and he could not hope ever to

There was no time to indulge in melancholy reflections just then. The commandant of the island of Nu came on board, to take the convicts over in his charge. He inspected each one singly, man by mar, or rather number by number, and No. 5,338 came in his turn.

" This convict was very ill on the voyage," the ship's doctor remarked. He does not appear to be accustomed to hard labor, I should advise his being given work in the hospital. for a time at least." Then be added, dropping his voice: "He is a priest, and I fully believe bim to be nnocent."
