In Canada misrepresented on the $1 and $2 Dominion bills, by the devices that fill the middle ground of these notes? The London Free Press takes the affirmative side of the question. It says: "Take a quiet look at them. One picture a party of lumber jacks prying a log into a river, with a shanty in the distance. The other shows some fishermen in a punt, one armed with a dip net. Are lumbering and fishing everything in this country? The pictures exhibit Canada as in the earliest, most primitive condition. While we regard farming as the backbone of the country, the factory output is done that of the farms, and the earnings of the railways are nearly half the farm earnings. Yet the farm, the factory and the railway have no show in the designs of our national currency."
