CARE OF THE FEET.

Milady should take just as good care of her feet as she does of her complexion. To give them an occasional bath is not enough. At least once a day they should be soaked in plenty of water and thoroughly dried Then a small amount of good cold cream should be rubbed on the insteps, soles and toes. This should then be covered with a good coating of talcum powder, the stockings put on and a day of comfort will be the result.

Corns, one of the penalties of civilization, are troublesome things to cure and the best treatment is to have them properly attended to regularly by a chiropidist. It is dangerous to cut them yourself, as there is always the likelihood of cutting too deep, which may result seriously.

With the feet in good condition a roman should be able to walk gracefully and with perfect poise. Since poise means the control of one's balance, it might be well to mention some fundamenal exercises that will pro-

New Skin Remedy.

Since the old-fashioned theory curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many dif-ferent salves have been tried for skin diseases. With the short coal supply and the increasing cold weather, home heating is now a stern reality; but there is only one way to combat this hardship, and that is by getting an OIL HEATER.

Selling at last year's prices while everything else has gone "sky high," you will surely regret not getting one, as the price will soon go much higher.
