On Trying Too Hard to Please.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Is there such a thing as trying too hard to please, making too great an effort to have things go smoothly, being too sensitive to other people's feelings. A letter friend brought this problem to the surface of my mind by writing about one angle of it.

"It seems to me," she says, "that I am always trying with pleasant words to smooth off rough edges and really some times it might be better if I let them go."

The Neighbor's Children Woke The Baby.

"For instance, the children of the neighborhood have a great habit of coming in and making themselves very much at home in our house, waking up the baby and making me a lot of extra work, and taking up time I can ill spare. The men of the house sometimes send the children home with scoldings, but when they are away and the children come again I try to smooth it over. Now if I could just let it go and also make the children realize how much work I could save myself. What ought I to do? Is there such a thing as being too pleasant?"

I am much inclined to answer this question in the affirmative.

But You Take That Oil Right Out of Yourself.

It is an excellent thing to be tender of other people's feelings and to try to keep the machinery of life oiled with courtesy and graciousness, but I think one can go too far. For if you take too much out of yourself by being supersensitive in this respect, you wear yourself out and make yourself overfed and nervous and irritable, and thus defeat your intention of adding to the happiness of the world.

I have known people who were really too sensitive to other people's feelings. Many women are this way in respect to their husband's likes and dislikes and pleasures and displeasures. The woman, of whom I spoke the other day, whose dinner instantly became savories to her if her husband did not care for some dish, is a familiar example. And some women have the same attitude towards their children. Such selfishness makes others selfish.

Although such a state of mind indicates a high degree of selfishness it is not a healthy kind. I think we were meant to be a little more self-centered than that, and that it is healthier for ourselves and society that we should be. Such selfishness is thankful and furthermore it is almost sure to be counterbalanced by an access of selfishness in its object.

It is not for nothing that we are so constituted that "other people's troubles do not keep us awake nights." For if they did, we should never sleep at all.

Selfishness and complaisance are beautiful virtues but do not forget that a virtue carried to excess may become the most irritating and difficult of failings.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—I was badly kicked by my horse last May, and after using several preparations on my leg nothing would do. My leg was black as jet. I was laid up in bed for a fortnight and could not walk. After using three bottles of your MINARD'S LINIMENT I was perfectly cured, so that I could start on the road.

Household Notes

Apples can hardly be eaten too often.

Apples can be baked without sugar.

Pineapple gelatin is an agreeable change.

Grains are the cheapest foods we can eat.

Beets can be baked just as potatoes are.

Green corn soup can be made from rice stock.

Boiled rice with cheese sauce is a substitute for meat.

In preserving with honey use one cupful of honey to three cupfuls of water.

Sun-drying is one of the most satisfactory and cheapest methods of drying.

It is well to add salt to lima or string beans when they are partly cooked.

BALLADE OF AN AMERICAN LAD.

This is our pride and our boast:

Though to his death he may go,

Ever he'll stand at his post,

Never he'll turn from the foe.

Offering blow for blow,

Face front he'll stand,

But never a baby shall know

One scar as the mark of his hand.

Prussians may charge in a host,

Frightful as demons below,

Leaving on women enraptured

Their shame like the stain on the snow.

Daily more savage they grow

To maim at their leader's command,

But never a mother shall show

One scar as the mark of his hand.

Never a blood-dripping ghost

Shall stalk from some Flanders chateau

And come from that war-ridden coast,

Till the cock in the barn yard shall crow,

To haunt him with terrors. Oh, No!

If he live to come back to our land,

On the helpless there never shall glow

One scar as the mark of his hand.

L'Envoi.

God of men! We are proud it is so,

That never his need shall demand

That women and children must know

One scar as the mark of his hand.

The Elders Got Him.

The New Glasgow Chronicle, in discussing Sunday automobilism, and the noise of the horns, says: "The editor can avoid, by staying indoors, when he wants quiet. What got his goat was that in order to save his life he had to stay on the Church steps after the service until Elders of the congregation ceased backing, filling and honking their autos and got away. It's not a session room those Deacons need, but a garage. One don't much want an Elder to pray for, or with him, when that one feels fairly sure that the Deacon's mind is in his garage, figuring speed units, and that the stoner has a suspicion that the Deacon would be better off his knee tinkering at his machine than to be on them praying for him."

Milady's Boudoir

Tango dancers, both men and women, are apt to get wrinkles between their eyes and an anxious drawn expression around their mouths, caused by their efforts to acquire themselves creditably on the dancing floor. Wrinkles, like other troubles, seldom come singly, and with the wrinkles comes the droop at the corners of the mouth and the neck wrinkles caused by a stiff unnatural carriage of the body which some dancers affect.

While it may be a little difficult to manage one's face and one's feet at the same time, it is one of the essentials and should be given a great deal of attention. To expend physical and nervous energy at the same time must be avoided and unless one can make play of dancing it is better not to dance at all. The woman Tango tripper is often at a disadvantage also, because she is not properly dressed for the various motions demanded by the dance. No matter how skimpy the skirt may be at the lower edge, there must be ample room for dipping, or the dancer cannot hope to be graceful or to dance with a happy carefree face.

Tight dancing slippers are another menace to grace. No woman can hope to go through the Tango or any other dance, with a childlike freedom of movement unless she is comfortably shod. The more comfortable the dancer is, the more relaxed and carefree, the less danger of the peril of the Tango face which is fatal to beauty.

Germany and Spain.

New York Tribune: Germany is desperate. She knows now that the submarine campaign was a costly error. But her naval authorities are as stubborn as her military are in refusing to admit failure. Can the Kaiser bring himself to the point of confessing a blunder and a crime by meekly submitting to Spain's retaliatory programme? If he can't, if he still wants to heroine, to posture and to rattle the much-nicked German sword in its tarnished scabbard he must sever diplomatic relations and prepare for war. It would be wiser for him to retract and conciliate. But that is not the German manner. What is one more enemy among so many enemies? The German hand has been raised against every other man's hand. What could be more appropriate than that the German policy of naked and brutal egoism—of world power or downfall—should do its last perfect work of ruin and estrangement? It is the inescapable logic of Prussianism that all the rest of the world should join in ending its dream of depravity and madness.

27,000 Nurses.

There will be enough nurses to care for the sick and wounded of America's Army of 5,000,000 next year, according to a statement made by Miss M. Adelaide Nutting, chairman of the committee on nursing of the Committee of National Defense. She said that, whereas Surgeon General Gorgas had called for 25,000 graduate nurses by next January, 27,000 already had been enrolled by the Red Cross and 16,000 of these actually inducted into military service. A survey of the Nation's nursing strength, she declared, showed a reserve of 100,000, not more than 25 per cent of whom would be ineligible for service because of age, marriage, disability or other causes. Moreover, she said, 14,000 nurses had been graduated this year, and "the yearly increment may be expected to be greater as long as the war lasts." In addition, Miss Nutting stated 4,000 high school or college graduates have applied for admission to the Army School of Nurses, and 1,000 of these, who already have been enrolled, will be ready for service abroad when they are needed.

THE PLAYGROUND.

Vacation time has ended in Colorado's hills; the tourists home have wended, to talk about their thrills. In other years they wandered, regardless of the cost, and lavishly they squandered, and I'd like to think, to see them throwing their banknotes to the breeze that stuff like that was growing upon the old home trees. This year they skimped and hoarded, they missed no saving points; and men of money boarded at humble chili joints. I often heard them saying, the tourist girl and gent, "We'll do the kind of playing that doesn't cost a cent. I'd like to hire a burro to climb yon beetling crag, but that would plow a furrow in my small roll of swag. I'd like to drive you, honey, to Long's Peak's famous pond, but I must save my money, to buy another bond. Up there to Hallett's grotto on foot we'll blithely tramp; the rental of an auto would buy us many a sump." I saw the Wall street rooster, who's loaded with long green, jaunt round in car of pewter; he'd shelled his limousine. Men said, "We must remember, while we are playing here, that shortly, in September, the new loan will appear; and we must have the bundle to buy ten bonds or more; we'll back Yankee Doodle till Kaiser Bill is sore." They're loyal! Pretty near it! It surely makes me gay when people show that spirit, while out of doors at play.

Are You Master

or does your business master you? Does it insist on following you home and to bed and worrying you day and night until you are on the verge of nervous collapse?

A few weeks' use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for any business man or business woman whose nervous system has failed to stand the strain. It nourishes the nerves back to health and vigor.
